JAP FORCE 'LIQUIDATED' AFTER SEIZURE OF BURMA AIRDROME; CHINESE REINFORCED

British Unload Massive Bombs In West Europe

LONDON, March 27.—(AP)—Hundreds of British bombers cut a blazing pattern for the RAF's 1942 offensive against western Europe, unloading everything from fire bombs to massive two-ton explosives overnight upon the Ruhr valley and other Nazi targets across Belgium, the Netherlands and France.

The giant Krupp works at Essen, subjected to its second assault in two weeks, was the main target and other squadrons pounded an oil refinery near Ghent, airdromes in the Netherlands and docks at Le Havre.

Taking up where the night crews left off, daylight raiders roared over the channel today to strafe coastal targets and channel shipping.

The air ministry said RAF bombers with a strong escort of fighters attacked Ostend, Belgium, with one British fighter lost and one German plane destroyed.

The Germans struck back in a swift bombing and machine-gunning raid on two southwest coast towns where property was damaged but only one casualty inflicted. Another high-flying Nazi formation was intercepted over the southeast coast by RAF fighters and sent reeling back across the channel.

Tonight a lone raider bombed and machine-gunned a train near a northeast coast town, injuring about 40 passengers, the majority service men.

The raiders also were reported over East Anglia, but there were no immediate reports of casualties.

The urgent need to cripple German industries feeding tanks, guns and ammunition to 5,000,000 soldiers poised to pounce on Russia underline the mounting RAF offensive, informed quarters here asserted.

As the weather improves, raids in even greater force than last night's can be expected, they asserted, in response to the Soviet cry for "action now" to relieve pressure on the Red armies.

Some healthy licks were gotten in on the latest attack upon Essen and other targets in the Ruhr, the British reported. They attributed success of these attacks to "superb reconnaissance" by lone pilots who dared German fighters and anti-aircraft fire on pre-raid photographic expeditions.

German counter-shiping which moved with some freedom in mist-covered waters of winter were attacked vigorously yesterday in the Frisians by the coastal command.

The British paid fairly heavily for their overnight raids, losing 10 bombers. (The Germans claimed 16.) RAF fighters destroyed one enemy bomber over occupied territory and another over England.

Axis Plane Losses Over Malta Mount

CAIRO, Egypt, March 27.—(AP) Axis plane losses over Malta mounted to 34 in two days yesterday when RAF pilots, some of them veterans of the Battle of Britain, tore into raiding formations losing their longest assault of the war upon the island fortress, the British announced today.

This battle raged uninterrupted for six hours and during the furious assault RAF headquarters said four Axis bombers were knocked down and a number of others damaged by the defending airmen without the loss of a single British plane. The day's bag was added to 30 Axis craft reported destroyed on Wednesday alone.

The RAF communique acknowledged some damage to Malta's off-bombing military installations as well as casualties.

Spitfire fighters operating from Malta bases were credited also with playing a big part in aiding units of the Mediterranean fleet shepherding a valuable convoy en route to the island.

The British fliers intercepted Axis formations of as many as 60 planes in one day.

SPAIN CALLS RECRUITS

BERN, Switzerland, March 27.—(AP)—Spain, seeking to strengthen her army, has called up recruits who normally would not have been called until 1943, a Havas agency dispatch from Madrid reported today.

U. S. ANSWER TO U-BOAT SINKINGS—These sharp-prowed Liberty ships, being fitted out with machinery and cargo-handling

Hopes Are Boosted On Eastern Anchor Of Allied Defenses

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

NEW DELHI, India, March 27.—The Chinese holding the eastern anchor of the Allied lines in Burma have liquidated the Japanese force which captured the Toungoo airdrome, and with the heartening help of newly arrived reinforcements are now battling the invaders on three sides of the city, a Chinese communique announced tonight.

The Japanese, too, are bringing up reinforcements in the severe conflict in the western, southern and northern outskirts of Toungoo, the Chinese acknowledged, but the arrival of help for the encircled defenders was declared to have given their already-high fighting spirit a tremendous boost. The badly-needed aid reached Toungoo's defenders after they had fought without pause for 60 hours and put under a merciless pounding by enemy bombing planes.

Whether the reinforcements would be enough to enable the Chinese to smash out of the trap remained unanswered but before the announcement of their arrival it was admitted here that the Allied position there was in grave peril.

Retreat Cut Off.

Lacking air support, the Toungoo force was cut off from a retreat to the north by an enemy enveloping movement which had bypassed the city and reached beyond to capture Kyungong.

The British afternoon communique issued here said that enemy pressure against the Chinese was most severe from the northwest and that "enemy bombing continued all day in flights of 10 planes."

Coupled with the welcome news from Chungking was the announcement that Lieutenant General H. R. L. G. Alexander, commander of the British forces in Burma, had returned to Burma after visiting Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in the Chinese capital since Tuesday.

The purpose of Alexander's visit, it was announced, was to inform Chiang Kai-shek on the Burma situation and to make sure he was satisfied with arrangements for provisioning the Chinese in Burma.

Right Flank Menaced.

On the Allied right flank around Prome, the British themselves prepared for an imminent battle which may decide the issue of central Burma.

On the Prome front—which bars the way to the central Burmese oil fields—the enemy was moving up along the highway, up the Irrawaddy by boat and along its banks, and it also appeared that other Japanese bodies were striking obliquely through the gap in the Pegu Yoma mountain chain.

Action on this front was for the moment light, the British command reporting that there had been no contact north of Opho, which lies 65 miles below Prome, but the enemy's movements indicated that it was here that the decision would fall. The Japanese purpose, it appeared, was to wholly separate the Allies, attempting to roll the British back toward the coast, occupy the oil fields and then turn on the Chinese to the east.

Air Struggle Violent.

The struggle in the air continued with great violence, the reinforced enemy squadrons seeking to bomb out Allied air fields and communications.

Allied air reconnaissance established also that small enemy naval forces of one cruiser and a few destroyers were operating along the flank of India in the Bay of Bengal, near the recently fallen Andaman Islands.

Delayed dispatches from Burma told of a prediction by Lieutenant General Joseph W. Stilwell, the American officer commanding the Chinese forces in Burma, that the Allied forces in the Asiatic theater soon would be greatly strengthened by increased shipments of war materials from the United States under supervision of the U. S. Army Service Supply.

Great Difficulties Seen.

At the same time, however, he pointed to the great difficulties—the fact that it was 690 miles from Kunming to Burma, that the capacity of Burmese railroads was limited and that "it's tremendously long route to India from the United States."

He disclosed that a medical organization and command staff already had been set up, adding that until the problems of transport could be overcome "we'll crawl along on one wheel."

"We hope," he added, "to bolster the Chinese considerably with American special arms services. What China lacks we are trying to supply."

Speaking of the task in the air, he said: "The Chinese don't like one damn bit to be bombed without air support of their own, but they can take it."

"The enemy is now sitting in the center of a circle with the Allies on an arc across Burma. I imagine we are in for pretty heavy bombing until our own air reinforcements can counter those the Japs have brought up."

Defense Row Given To Mediation Board

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

The controversy over whether Atlanta or Fulton county shall command the civilian defense setup for the metropolitan area was sent yesterday to a mediation board composed of city and county civilian defense leaders and prominent citizens.

Court Cites Dr. Evans, Wife For Contempt

Dr. Hiram W. Evans, former imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, and his wife were cited for contempt of court yesterday because of the removal of records of five construction companies from Dr. Evans' office in the Hurt building, and were ordered to appear before Judge E. E. Pomeroy at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The citation demand was made by Solicitor General John A. Boykin during the hearings of a similar charge of contempt against Mrs. Mary S. Vines, Evans' former secretary, and Judge Pomeroy signed an order directing the couple appear at once. Both Dr. and Mrs. Evans were in court at the time.

Judgment Reserved.

The judge then resumed the Vines hearing and, at its conclusion, reserved judgment. He then announced he would hear the Evans citation Wednesday morning.

On Thursday, Mrs. Evans testified she removed the records, which are wanted by the grand jury in connection with its investigation of alleged graft during the administration of former Governor Rivers, without knowledge of Mrs. Vines, because they might tend to incriminate her and her husband. Dr. Evans denied he instructed his wife to take the records, but admitted he was in the office at the time. Her counsel contended that, as a stockholder in the companies, she had a right to take them.

Camera Damaged. Yesterday's luncheon recess was enlivened by an encounter between the former imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan and a Journal photographer on Pryor street, outside the courthouse, during which Evans damaged a camera, said by its owner, Tracy O'Neal, to be worth $125.

Mrs. Evans objected to having her picture taken and hid behind

Board Members. Councilman John A. White, vice chairman of the city defense council and finance committee chairman, who presided, named Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, and George Biggers, general manager of the Atlanta Journal, to serve with Councilman James E. Jackson, chairman of the municipal defense council, as city representatives.

Charles Currie, chairman of the Fulton county defense committee, designated Robert Strickland, president of the Trust Company of Georgia, and Marion Smith, prominent attorney, to serve with him as county members of the arbitration group. E. S. Papy, co-ordinator for area, will serve as counsel to the body.

Resolution Suspended. In the interim, the resolution passed Thursday by the county committee designating Currie as commander of the area, and Lon Sullivan as Currie's executive assistant, will be suspended under an agreement Currie made when the mediation program was approved.

It was the county resolution which precipitated the open break between the city and county defense commanders and caused Brigadier General E. G. Peyton, commander of the Atlanta defense setup, to offer his resignation.

Peyton acceded to the importunities of his friends and did not offer his resignation at the joint session yesterday as he had planned to do. It was drawn, and Mayor Lyle had already drawn a reply declining to accept it.

Proper Step. The Moseley move to compromise was approved by leaders of both factions as a step in the right direction.

Currie said his organization was not trying to "shove Peyton out of the picture, but I've got a job to do, and we can't have efficiency unless we have united command."

Hungry Fulton county relief clients, instead of vainly waiting for food at the doors of the welfare agencies, may this summer go to North Fulton park and, from a distance, hear light operas presented.

Although the reliefers may not have the price of admission entitling them to sit in the county's new rubber-footed metal chairs—the purchase of which was authorized Saturday a week ago by the board of commissioners at a cost of $24,000—it will be difficult to keep the operatic strains from floating beyond the limits of the new amphitheater within earshot of the poor, observers pointed out.

County commissioners yesterday told representatives of the League of Women Voters and Wellborn Ellis, relief administrator, that the county's indigent would probably have to do without the additional $50,000 which the grand jury recommended be allotted to the department of public welfare. The budget wouldn't permit, they said, although Commissioner Charlie Brown said the need was great.

The commissioners at the Saturday meeting unanimously voted

Tea Consumption To Be Cut in Half

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) The War Production Board today ordered the nation's tea consumption cut in half to conserve dwindling tea supplies.

The order was intended, the board said, to stretch the stocks of tea on hand in this country on January 1—which it was said would have lasted six months unless restricted—to a full year's supply.

The order does not take into account tea received at a normal rate from the Far East during January and February, and WPA said there was "reason to believe" that tea would continue to enter this country in ships returning from voyages taking military supplies to the western Pacific.

MACARTHUR REGARDED.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Mar. 27.—(AP)—General Douglas MacArthur now has a general's uniform made by an Australian tailor. The United Nations supreme commander lost his kit during his dramatic dash from the Philippines and since had been wearing a drab uniform with bush jacket and without insignia.

Quezon Takes Philippine Staff To Australia

UNITED STATES ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Australia, March 27.—(AP)—Battle-ried Australian "diggers" brought home from the Middle East were organized tonight under General, Sir Thomas Blamey, an old hand at working with American fighting men, and assumed their role in the defense of Australia beneath the supreme command of General Douglas MacArthur.

As preparations against the Japanese thus were strengthened, there were these other developments:

President Manuel Quezon arrived from the Philippines with his family and cabinet.

American and Australian bombers raided the Japanese base at Keopang, Dutch Timor.

The Japanese again weakly attacked Port Moresby, New Guinea.

The government, in announcing General Blamey's appointment as commander in chief of the Allied ground forces in Australia, said all Australian forces which it intended to return from abroad now had arrived.

The number were not disclosed, but the return of Australian airmen from Britain and land forces from North Africa had been proposed when the Japanese threat first came close to Australia. As deputy commander in chief of all British forces in the Middle East, General Blamey first went out with 20,000 men, and these were periodically augmented.

They took leading roles in the first Libyan offensive, in the battles of Greece and Crete, and in the conquest of Syria.

General Blamey, in 1918, when only 34 years old, was chief of staff of the American 27th and 30th and the Australian First and Fourth divisions, which pierced the Hindenburg line. Until the present war that was the only time American troops were brigaded with those of another nation.

Blamey enthusiastically described General MacArthur's supreme Allied command as the only workable arrangement, saying: "I am very delighted that the whole Anzac command has been given to one man, thus giving united direction to the whole strategy of the situation."

Seaborne Invasion Perils North Flank

MOSCOW, March 27.—(AP)—A Russian sea-borne force has landed behind the German lines on the Murmansk coast under the protecting guns of the Red fleet in a surprise Arctic offensive to clear the Allied northern supply lanes and menace the Nazi-Finnish flank, it was announced tonight.

The Red air force was in co-operative action with the sea and land troops—this, it is apparent, was the significance of the great German-Russian air battle over Murmansk earlier in the week, in which the Russians shot down 11 out of 66 Nazi planes.

Meager accounts of the action, broadcast by the Moscow radio, said the Russian landings—presumably on the Rybachy peninsula northwest of Murmansk—caused vast confusion among the German troops and have held up there all winter.

Air Attacks Heavy. The radio said the Nazis were trying to meet the new offensive with heavy air attacks. Small Soviet submarines, operating in adjacent waters, were reported to have sunk at least 10 German transports in operations connected with the Russian troop move.

The action was described as "a purely Russian operation."

The landing had deep implications for the area between Murmansk and the North Cape of Norway has long been regarded as an extremely logical setting for the opening of a second front by Russia's U. S. and British allies, in order to assure constant and increasing use of the Murmansk supply route and its rail connections south, knock Finland out of the war and bring heavy pressure from a new sector on the whole German position east and north of the Baltic states.

Thus the Russian landing could be intended to pave the way for an Arctic lunge by Allied forces.

Nazi Flotilla Explained. In anticipation of just such a maneuver, the Germans have sent a powerful flotilla to northern Norwegian waters, led by the super-dreadnought Tirpitz.

Up to now most British-American supplies have been reaching Russia by way of the White Sea and Archangel, but Murmansk is a better, all-year port with superior rail connections.

In an action apparently co-ordinated with the Arctic move to open the Murmansk-Leningrad supply route, the Russian General Feduninsky was reported in Stockholm to have started a "now or never" push to relieve Leningrad, throwing the Germans back eight miles on a broad front west of that city and engaging four large German formations.

While this attack was in progress, sharp fighting between patrols occurred along the front lines in Bataan, and one American-Filipino patrol carried out a successful raid on a strong enemy position.

Aid for Women With Venereal Diseases Asked

Establishment of State Institution Proposed by Abercrombie.

Establishment of a state institution for confinement of women infected with venereal disease was recommended yesterday by the director of the Georgia Health Department.

Dr. T. F. Abercrombie said upon his return from Washington that the federal government would furnish the personnel for the institution and pay the maintenance cost.

The money would come from funds provided to help protect the armed forces against venereal diseases.

Proposed plans call for keeping the women in the institution for about a year. This would assure longer treatment than is generally possible now. Vocational training also might be given to the women.

"If prostitutes knew they were going to be arrested and held for a year in Georgia," Dr. Abercrombie said, "I am sure most of them would stop at the state line."

Other states are making similar plans, he said.

One hitch confronting Georgia officials is the lack of an available institution. Mayor Charles L. Bowdye, of Macon, has proposed that the state use one or more of the buildings at the old Milledgeville prison.

Mrs. Albert Hill, director of institutions for the State Welfare Department, said she understood the Milledgeville buildings had been leased to the Baldwin county board of education and that the board was unwilling to let the state use them for detention of prostitutes.

The health director also pointed out that counties where the women were sentenced would have to pay the cost of transporting them to the institution. Likewise, he said, it would be within the judges' discretion whether to sentence the women to the state institution.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall ruled several weeks ago a prostitute after serving her sentence, could not be removed from the county of conviction to be held for treatment for a venereal disease. Dr. Abercrombie said this ruling would not interfere with a state detention institution if a woman were sentenced to it at the time of conviction.

'Jap Not Tough as Individual'

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Take it from a naval officer who just got home from Java—

The Japanese is not a very tough opponent as an individual. The Americans, Australians, British and Dutch are tougher. Japanese planes are inferior to the best that the United States can turn out against them. And the Japanese navy, despite its great victory due to numerical superiority in the battle of Java, is regarded by American Navy men as qualitatively inferior to ours. Although this has yet to be finally proved.

But, said Captain Felix B. Stump, who was attached to the Allied high command in Java—Japanese pilots are "damn good!" The Japanese forces generally have a splendid organization, built up over several years. They know where they are going and although you shoot down their planes and sink their ships they always have something left to keep on going with.

Odds Re-emphasized. Captain Stump, 47, Clarksburg, W. Va., met reporters at the Navy Department today to sketch in some details of the now lost fight for the Dutch East Indies. His recital of American heroism in the face of death emphasized and re-emphasized the odds against which Americans were battling in that fight.

He told of the now-famous battle of Macassar Strait as giving "one reason we are better than the Japanese."

A great Japanese convoy was heading down the strait toward the main chain of the Indies. American scouting planes had reported that two cruisers definitely, and possibly two others, and eight destroyers were with the convoy. Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Asiatic fleet chief, decided on a night attack by four old American World-War-type destroyers, fast but lightly armored. "We expected to see some of them sunk," Captain Stump said.

Story of Heroism.

They went in the darkest time of night and located the convoy. They steamed by once and fired all the torpedoes they had on one side. Then they turned around and steamed back again, firing all the rest of their torpedoes. But it was blind firing in the darkness and no hits were observed.

By that time the heavy guns of the enemy cruisers and destroyers were roaring. But the four "old oil cans" closed in to point-blank range and shot it out with the Japanese for an hour and 15 minutes. They blew up at least one Japanese cruiser and one destroyer and believed they damaged other ships. Then they pulled out. One American destroyer had been hit once and several men were hurt.

Captain Stump told, too, of the sinking of an unidentified American destroyer whose men fought her even while the waters closed over her decks. One petty officer stayed at his 50-caliber gun until he was surrounded by flaming oil. Finally just before the ship went down he plunged off and swam to a hospital ship near by, but was so badly burned he died.

Enemies Within U. S. Are Big Problem, Officers Are Told.

The "road of sacrifice" caused by the war "will yet be greater in length and the hardships have only begun—they will be multiplied daily," Lawrence S. Camp, United States attorney, told 60 law enforcement officers attending the quarterly FBI conference here yesterday.

The officers, coming to the conference from 17 Georgia counties, heard United States Attorney Camp, Lieutenant Paul Dows, of the Fulton county police, F. R. Hammack, agent in charge of the Atlanta field office of the FBI, and Agent A. I. Means.

Camp told the officers enemies of the United States say the nation's great need, unity, cannot be achieved because "our people speak in a medley of discordant voices."

He said the Army and Navy could cope with enemies on the battlefield, but enemies within the nation, those who "cry Liberty" and seek license, those who "drape themselves with the stars and stripes and seek to destroy everything the stars and stripes stand for," were the problem of the law enforcement officers and the United States attorney's office.

'White Shirts' Chief Ordered Held for U. S.

Is Charged With Urging Disloyalty in Armed Forces.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) George W. Christians, of Chattanooga, Tenn., organizer of the "Crusader White Shirts," was ordered arrested tonight on charges of distributing propaganda urging insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny or refusal of duty by members of the armed forces.

Attorney General Biddle announced the action shortly after issuing a similar order for the prosecution of Rudolph Fahl, of Denver, Colo., on charges of attempting to undermine the morale of the military forces.

These are the first such charges to be brought in the Second World War and will be prosecuted, the Justice Department announced, under a section of the 1940 Smith act, which provides a maximum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine. Both men are native-born Americans.

Addressed Oglethorpe Officers. Christians, described as organizer of "The Economic Liberty Movement" as well as the "Crusader White Shirts," was charged with sending a communication addressed to "officers of Fort Oglethorpe (Ga.) and Camp Forrest (Tenn.)" on December 5, 1941, designed to impair the morale of the military forces.

On December 29, 1941, the Justice Department continued, further literature was received at the headquarters of Camp Forrest, addressed to the commanding officer and signed by Christians as "commander in chief of the Crusader White Shirts."

Fahl is charged, the department said, with verbal statements to officers from the Air Corps Gunnery School at Las Vegas, Nev., while they were at Lowry Field, Colo., on January 31. He is alleged to have told them they were "suckers" and were not fighting for democracy.

One of the Christians communications, quoted in part by the Justice Department, said: "Even in wartime we are permitted to ask questions, so on the reverse side of this page is a list of them which are designed to disintegrate the existing order and create a reign of terror."

"Hang Them to a Tree."

"When the mad mob gets in motion, make sure that they dig all the blood-sucking gangsters out from under their pile of rocks and steel. Line them up against a wall and shoot them. See that they run down all the political parasites. Don't miss a single politician, big or small. Just hang them to the nearest tree. I want to see the moral lepers out of our prostitute press into a penthouse and burn them."

Included was a hand-written note addressed to "C. O." (The usual abbreviation for commanding officer) and signed "G. W. C.," which read:

"The enclosed ought to make me shot, but if our boys in the Philippines can take—I can, too—dish it out to the yellow-bellied bastards who are so stupidly and stubbornly got us into this mess. You are supposed to be an American. See if you can get these questions answered. Maybe you will get shot instead of me."

Organized in 1931.

Among the questions asked were these: "Do we die for dollar domination?" "Are we fighting to quiet the struggles of the victims of economic strangulation?" "Do Germany, Italy and Japan have the right to fight for freedom from our economic strangulation?" "Are we fighting to restore Europe to economic bondage?" "What is the market price of defense bonds and stamps?" "Are we fighting to make Roosevelt the dictator of the world?" and "does our commander-in-chief have idealism or is he just the world's greatest humbug?"

The department said that it was investigating other documents signed by Christians, who was said to have organized and incorporated his "Crusaders for Economic Liberty" at Nashville, Tenn., on June 23, 1931.

It quoted from a so-called "general orders" to the "Crusaders White Shirts" issued in February, 1933, which described that the organization should do, including how "to take control of the local government."

Fahl, in his conversation with the Air Corps officers, was alleged to have attacked President Roosevelt and this country's allies in a way which the Justice Department said was "allegedly designed to impair the morale and loyalty of the military forces."

Ralph Townsend Confesses Guilt

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Ralph Townsend, of Lake Geneva, Wis., pleaded guilty today to a charge of failing to register as a foreign agent on the behalf of Japanese interests. Townsend said he was liable to a sentence of up to two years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

He was indicted January 28 with two other Americans and three Japanese, of whom one, Tsutomu Obana, pleaded guilty March 13.

Trial of the two Americans, David Warren Ryder and Frederick Vincent Williams, both of San Francisco, has been set for May 11.

Justice T. Alan Giddens of district court referred Townsend's case to the probation officer and permitted him to continue at liberty under $5,000 bond.

Butcher Shops Asked Not To Raise Prices WPB Orders Refrigerator Stock Unfrozen

Mid-March Levels Are Selected as Basis by OPA.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) The Office of Price Administration asked butcher shops and retail meat markets today not to raise prices of ham, bacon, chops and other pork products above mid-March levels, and declared it was ready to crack down promptly if retailers began "price-gouging."

The appeal was issued by Dan A. West, director of the OPA consumer division. He advised consumers to question any increase over mid-March prices and report immediately to OPA any "marked increases." Wholesale prices of most pork products are now covered under a temporary price ceiling based on March 3-7 price levels.

West observed that present retail pork prices were nearly the highest ever recorded for this season of the year and that supplies were limited.

"Meat sellers have an important obligation to the nation's health to avoid further price rises which will make it impossible for many families to buy these products," he declared.

Agnes Scott, Tech Glee Clubs Will Perform Twice Today.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY.

The very model of a modern major general, his bevy of beautiful daughters and their tender-hearted pirate lovers tripped across the stage of Presser Hall at Agnes Scott last night, in the glee clubs of that college and Georgia Tech joined hands to sing the rollicking melodies of Sullivan to Gilbert's tongue-twisting lyrics.

"The Pirates of Penzance," one of the famous English team's most melodious opera-comiques, made its bow last night with Warren Lee Terry, of New York, giving a professional finish to the role of the "Major General" and William Wyatt, Atlanta tenor, carrying off the singing honors as Frederic, the pirate apprentice.

The artistic sets and colorful costumes, as gorgeous ones as we have seen in any professional production, also added to the finesse of the presentation. And the swarm of lovely daughters, living up to requirements of the text, further endowed the scenery.

The lilting, lively music was well interpreted by the choruses, who also proved themselves to be apt comedians. Elise Nance, Agnes Scott senior, sang the role of the hero's nursemaid, "Ruth," with poise and excellent diction. While Nina May Sneed's clear soprano voice did credit to the capacious role of the heroine, "Mabel."

A. B. Johnson, bass, as the Pirate King, swashbuckled convincingly, as Don Frey, baritone, his lieutenant, "Samuel," evidenced a pleasing tone quality. Then William Parker, as the Police Sergeant, gave the interested audience further cause for laughter.

Others in the cast who seemed at home in their parts were Annie Wilds, as "Kate," Laura Cumming, as "Edith," and Joella Craig, as "Isabel."

The concert opera will be repeated twice today, a matinee at Lawson General hospital at 3 o'clock, followed by a night performance at the college at 8:30 o'clock. There being an overflow of feminine talent at Agnes Scott, the leading roles will be switched to give others a chance. A petit, pretty freshman will sing the role of "Mabel" tonight.

The Georgia Power Company will furnish busses to transport the players, in costume, to the hospital.

Butcher Shops Asked Not To Raise Prices WPB Orders Refrigerator Stock Unfrozen

Mid-March Levels Are Selected as Basis by OPA.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) The War Production Board today "unfroze" stocks of domestic electric refrigerators held by dealers and permitted their unrestricted retail sale.

The action will permit dealers to dispose of the entire stock they had on hand as of February 14, when the government froze all such inventories.

Under the original WPB order, a dealer was allowed to sell up to 100 new refrigerators or 1-12 of the number he sold in 1941, with sales dating from the freezing order.

Restrictions still apply to gas and containing at least 5 per cent cause of shortages of such equipment. WPB said, but dealers will be permitted to sell them back to distributors or manufacturers.

Water Supply In Chamblee Called 'Menace'

Heated Words Exchanged at Mass Meeting on Problem.

Reports by health officials that Chamblee's water supply, furnished by a private water company on a 50-year franchise basis, is "dangerous" last night caused heated words to be exchanged at a meeting of citizens in the Masonic Hall there.

Called together by Mayor C. F. Kellam, more than 100 citizens, city council members and stockholders in the Chamblee Water Company, heard Dr. J. R. Evans, DeKalb county health officer, N. M. deJarnette, of the State Health Department, and Dr. W. A. Mendenhall, Chamblee physician, present reports on water tests which they said indicated the town's water supply is a "public menace" and that "it is entirely possible for an epidemic such as typhoid fever to sweep the section."

Mayor Kellam said the reports covered a 14-year period and that the water company had been warned repeatedly of the danger. Specifically mentioned was a sewer line which the mayor said ran within 15 feet of the city well.

The presence in the room of J. B. McCrary, stockholder in the private concern, served only to intensify the mayor's attack on what he termed "a situation I'm warning you about before an epidemic gets started."

McCrary said the company had not received notice of the findings of the health officials. He pointed out that only yesterday, before the meeting, the company had installed a chlorinator to purify the water.

"All I've got to say," the mayor retorted, "is it was mighty quick work to get that thing started the very day of this meeting."

The city officials threatened to take legal action if the water situation is not remedied. More than $125 was subscribed last night by citizens to a fund to finance such an action.

Vinson Criticizes Labor and Capital

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) A complaint that neither labor nor management were "making any sacrifice" to promote the war effort was injected today into congressional hearings on proposals for war-time revision of the labor laws.

Both Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, and Representative Mott, Republican, Oregon, made this accusation upon learning William P. Withrow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, would receive a salary increase of $8,333 this year as president of the Blaw-Knox, a Pittsburgh steel fabricating plant.

Withrow had appeared before the committee to urge congressional legislation against any further spread of the closed shop during the war. Under his plan existing closed shop agreements would continue but new ones would be forbidden.

Pending before the committee, meanwhile, was the Smith bill to outlaw all closed shops for the duration, impose a six per cent profit limit on industry and suspend wage-hour law provisions requiring time and a half pay for time worked in excess of 40 hours weekly.

Others in the cast who seemed at home in their parts were Annie Wilds, as "Kate," Laura Cumming, as "Edith," and Joella Craig, as "Isabel."

The concert opera will be repeated twice today, a matinee at Lawson General hospital at 3 o'clock, followed by a night performance at the college at 8:30 o'clock. Too Many Investigations

One of the obstacles to progress of the United States war effort is the habit of congressional committees of conducting investigations into this, that or anything else. Many of these investigations duplicate those of other committees, all of them cost money from the Treasury and, while some serve good purpose, others undoubtedly are of no practical value to the nation.

An example of this congressional interference with the war program was seen within the past week, when Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, already burdened with the biggest job in the entire war organization, had to take valuable time to testify before an appropriations committee in regard to the government labor policy. As a matter of fact, Nelson has nothing to do with the making of that labor policy, which is a function actually resting on congress itself.

It would serve good purpose if some form of restraint on the congressional tendency to "investigate" could be put into operation. It would do away with many interruptions to the work of important officers in vital posts and it would, likewise, remove one source of public uneasiness and doubt as to the conduct of the war.

It is a duty of congress to hold a check rein on government expenditures and the activities of government officials and employees. But it is foolish to hold congressional investigations on any excuse, no matter how flimsy, when the possible saving cannot be as large as the cost of the investigating committee itself.

A western court suggested that a lady barrister remove her hat. This, though, brings up the further legal point: Is the modern hat a hat?

At Last—A Parade!

April 6, Army Day, has been designated as the date for Atlanta's first war parade since the opening of hostilities on December 7.

President Roosevelt has asked that the parade become a celebration of "Total War" day, to bring home to the people the fact that in the modern method of conflict, "total war" literally means the direct involvement of every man, woman and child.

Carrying out this idea there will be in the Atlanta parade not only units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, but police, firemen, Civilian Defense volunteers, parents of men in the armed services, youth groups, Red Cross members, veterans organizations and members of civic and fraternal organizations.

There will be, too, workers from the war plants, but only those off duty at the time. There must be no interruption for the machine tools that make the essentials of war.

There will be farmers, carrying their tools of agriculture, typifying the important part farm production must play in the conflict. And there will be wagons carrying loads of scrap metal, old paper and other junk, representing the "salvage for victory" campaign.

It will be, as far as it can be made, an auto-less day. The paraders will march, not ride. Even spectators have been asked to walk to the line of march, rather than driving their cars. It will thus be a day exemplifying the days to come when the last civilian automobile is worn out and there are no tires to ride upon.

Atlanta needs such a parade. Many other cities of the nation need one, too. For, despite the knowledge of the war and all it involves that is held by nearly all our people, there is something about the evidence of our eyes that impresses more deeply than all the facts we may be told.

A parade awakens a spark of enthusiasm no other medium can touch. It brings a glow to the eye and a sense of national pride to the heart. It touches the emotions, where other things appeal only to the intelligence.

By all means see the parade on April 6. It can mean much in the further awakening of the spirit of patriotism and of determination which we must awaken if we are to win the war.

—ALTOGETHER—FOR VICTORY—
It appears some of the concomitants of varnish come from the Far Eastern war areas. It makes it awkward when one has to shellac the Jap.

Turkey and Bulgaria

Emphasis is lent to a general belief that the Germans may strike through Turkey with the coming of spring by the talks reported to have been held between Hitler and King Boris, of Bulgaria.

Hitler desperately has been seeking reinforcement from his allies, yet it is almost beyond reason to believe he would use Bulgarian troops on the Russian front or against the Yugo-Slavs.

Communist and Slav influence is great in Bulgaria, and troops from this country used on a Russian battlefield would prove entirely untrustworthy, not because they are poor soldiers but because they are much too likely to be more friendly toward the Russian "foe" than the Hitler "friends."

The Turks, however, are age-old enemies of the Bulgars and the matching of the two nations would be a masterpiece surpassing any yet uncovered by the promoters in Berlin. The Bulgarian army with normal equipment is probably a match for the troops Turkey might oppose against it, and the addition of small units of special German troops would give the invaders a margin.

It must be doubted that Great Britain or the United States would be able to afford Turkey the full assistance needed to halt any invasion, at least short of the Asian mainland, if there. Indications are that the Germans would strike a simultaneous blow from Crete toward southern Turkey and Syria which would immobilize the British army in Syria.

—ALTOGETHER—FOR VICTORY—
Most remarkable case of mellowing with age is that of Irving Berlin, wanting to murder the bugler in the last war and now willing to kiss the income tax collector.

Gasoline Prices

While consumers of gasoline in Georgia and Florida will be gratified that these two states are exempted from the price increase ordered in other eastern states, there is one point in the order by the Office of Price Administration which should be clarified.

That point is, are these two states likewise exempted from the half-cent per gallon increase in tank wagon prices, as well as from the retail increase? If not, it appears a severe injustice has been done to filling station operators in the two states, already hard hit by the reduction in automobile usage caused by the rubber shortage.

While retail prices for gasoline in the two states may be higher than in other sections, the margin of profit for the filling station operator, the difference between the tank wagon price he pays and that he charges the customer at his pumps, is no greater here than elsewhere. In fact that margin in Georgia is smaller than in many other states, even those with a lower retail price.

Thus, if the tank-wagon increase is effective here, and the retail price increase barred, it simply means the wholesaler in Georgia and Florida will profit at the expense of the filling station operators.

While the loss of half a cent profit on each gallon sold does not seem excessive, it will be sufficient to put many station operators out of business, coming as it does at a time when they are merely hanging on by the narrowest of margins, anyway.

War Depreciation

The strain of the war is telling upon Germany, in more ways than one.

German officials have themselves admitted, according to reliable sources of information, that the productive capacity of workers in their own war factories is already showing a shrinkage, due to the increasing exhaustion these men and women are feeling under the long, unbroken strain. The human machine will only work for a given length of time and, if the hours of labor and the intensity of work are increased beyond a proper point, that human machine begins to break down the earlier.

Furthermore, many of the younger men in the factories, even those possessed of important skills, are being drawn into the army in desperate effort to replace the heavy losses suffered by the Nazi battalions in the Russian campaign.

Add to these factors the further truth that tremendous totals of needed machinery repairs are left undone in wartime, and it is self-evident the German productive war machine is beginning to show the early signs of a fatal depreciation which must, inevitably, increase in geometric progression as the pressure of war continues and grows.

Georgia Editors Say:

IN WAR THE TWIN DO MEET
(From The Moultrie Observer.)

In normal times we can almost persuade ourselves that there is no longer any north or south. There are many travelers now, and northern ways are familiar to southerners who get around, and to northerners who make pilgrimages to the south. They know our grits and corn bread, and we know their baked beans and "light bread." The war is taking a new crop of southerners to the north and some new material from the north is coming south. There would be those with critical eyes and with chips on their shoulders.

We caution southerners who go north for the first time against advertising themselves, or becoming conspicuous through their criticisms that reflect sectionalism. It is no mark of good breeding or culture. Look and listen and reserve your comment until you return home, or until you write home.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

THE LARGER CASE WASHINGTON, March 27.—After nearly three weeks of desultory debate, the senate at last seems headed for a vote on the Langer case.

Involved is the right of William Langer, a Republican of North Dakota, to hold a seat in the United States senate to which, it is conceded, he was duly elected. Following his election in 1940, he was allowed to take the oath "without prejudice" but with the understanding that the senate would later pass on his qualifications for the office.

One year after Senator Langer took his seat the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee, after extensive hearings, decided by a vote of 13 to 3 that charges of moral turpitude brought against him by various persons of his state had been "proven beyond all reasonable doubt." It was, therefore, recommended that Mr. Langer be denied the right to serve as a United States senator.

That is the issue which the senate has been debating these many days. In ordinary times, the debate would have attracted widespread public attention. Under the spell of war conditions, no one has been very much interested—least of all the senate. Only a corporal's guard in the chamber to listen to the long harangue which is being printed about it by the newspapers, outside of North Dakota.

NOT PARTY ISSUE The committee's decisive vote is evidence enough that the preliminary pro-ceedings were devoid of partisan bias. All three members who voted to give Langer a seat were Democrats.

Under the circumstances, it would seem there was little occasion for all of the time wasted in debate. Senator Barkley, the majority leader, was finally able to get an agreement for cutting short the talk only after complaining to his colleagues that "at the rate we are now proceeding, India will have been given dominion or some other state, China will have run Japan back into her islands, and Stalin will have invaded Germany before we dispose of the Langer case."

Despite the overwhelming recommendation of the senate committee, Langer will probably be allowed to hold his seat, although it probably would be a good thing for the moral tone of the senate if he were ousted. A lot of members are prepared to vote for him on the grounds that his election was in due order and that the senate has no right to go beyond the determining a person's qualifications to sit in the august chamber.

MANY CHARGES All of the charges against Langer concern his administration as governor of North Dakota, to which he was twice elected. They run the full gamut of moral turpitude. The basis of the Privileges and Elections Committee report, he stands convicted of a dozen charges to unfrock the committee hearings makes him out a bad Huey Long, at best. There is no question as to the fact that Senator Langer was duly and lawfully elected by the people of North Dakota, who seem to prefer him with all of his faults. He meets all the constitutional qualifications on this score. It is simply a question of whether moral turpitude should figure as a factor in the fitness of an individual to hold a senate seat. The strict legalistic view will uphold his right to the seat. Broader considerations would result in his ouster.

The senate, by virtue of constitutional provisions giving it the sole right to pass on the qualifications of its own members, can decide the case on either grounds. There is no appeal.

TIMES CALL FOR STRICTNESS At a time, however, when the country is on the upsurge of a great moral feeling incident to winning the war, it seems more appropriate that stricter moral standards guide the hands of our national lawmakers. This may be a harsher credo than that advanced by old Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina, who, in urging Langer's seating, said the senate wouldn't have a corporal's band left if it delved into the past of its members, but it is a safer measure for the times.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Mail From Home.

Colonel Stanley Washburn, a man who has served as war correspondent with 20 different armies and reported from approximately a hundred battles since 1904, has written a letter to the editor which is important enough to be read and remembered by every soul in the United States. The letter appeared in The Washington Evening Star for March 18.

The letter is about the letters which soldiers receive from their home folks. There is no single factor, says Colonel Washburn, so important in maintaining soldier morale.

If any woman asks what she can do to help win the war, he adds, tell her the best and most effective contribution she can make is frequent, cheerful and interesting letters to that son, husband or brother in the service, at home or abroad.

Arrangements have been made for mail for American soldiers, wherever in the world they are in this war, to go forward with the ration supplies. Thus the handicap of the last war, when it often took months to reach the man for whom it was destined, will be largely avoided.

And, in this question of soldier mail, once again we must credit the Japs with exceeding wisdom, according to Colonel Washburn.

How the Japs Do.

"The only army with which I was ever associated which saw the vital necessity of this mail from home," he writes, "was the Japanese army to which I was attached in 1904 and 1905. Much as we dislike the Japanese methods of conducting war, we still can learn a great deal by the study of their efficiency and how they maintain morale among their troops."

"When I was with Nogi's army at Port Arthur in 1904, I noticed that the moment a transport docked at Dally, the base for the Japanese army besieging Port Arthur, the mail was swung over on the dock before the gang planks were put down for the troops to disembark. It moved ahead of replacements, munitions and even medical supplies. I saw mail carriers, brought from Japan, crawling through shallow trenches, dragging sacks of mail behind them and actually delivering letters to the troops to within a hundred yards of the enemy lines and within an hour of an attack."

"Every soldier knew that if there was a letter for him from home he would get it before he was either killed or become a casualty."

Restraining Influence.

Most of the boys in American armies have been taken from a family circle. They arrive overseas inclined to be homesick and lonely. And, in a strange land, free of the restraining influence of home, there are many temptations to which they are much more apt to succumb if they get the idea they have been forgotten by the folks at home.

Soldiers wait, eagerly and hungrily for their names to be called, when the mail is distributed. If there is nothing for some lonely, homesick lad, he becomes depressed, drinks perhaps more liquor than he should and runs around with girls of a kind he shouldn't.

Quoting Colonel Washburn further: "War is the negation of almost every human instinct, and it is only too common to hear the soldiers say, 'What hell, I'll probably be killed anyway. I never hear from home and what does it matter what I do?'"

"This writer well knows what it means as on one occasion he went for months without a letter from home and again in France he was once 65 days without a letter and then received 72 in one mail. To the average boy away from home for the first time this means apathy as to what he does and even indifference as to whether he is killed or not. Every woman and girl should realize this and do their part in winning the war by writing encouraging and affectionate letters to the boys."

Every home can now know that due to the streamlined postal arrangements their loving thoughts reach the soldiers as regularly and as promptly as does their food. Rations are food for the body, but letters are food for the soul. Tanks and airplanes are munitions, tanks and airplanes are even more vitally important to the happiness of those who are away and fighting willingly for the defense of their country."

The truth of what Colonel Washburn writes is self-evident. And there is, too, proof that the new arrangements for Army mail are working well. When the last contingent of American troops arrived in Ireland, they found their mail from home already waiting there.

So, sweethearts, sisters, wives and mothers—get out pen and ink and paper and write that boy of yours in the Army. The right kind of letter will go far in helping him do your family's share in winning the war.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Wednesday, March 28, 1917:

"Under guard of a company of Marines and confined in locked cages, the transport of 411 interned German sailors from the Kronprinz Wilhelm arrived at Fort McPherson just as the sun was going down yesterday afternoon, and last night the men were quartered in the confines of a barbed-wire barricade."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Monday, March 28, 1892:

"Rome, Ga., March 27.—(Special.)—At the First Methodist church this morning Rev. Warren D. Candler preached."

Lean Years.

PALM SPRINGS, Cal., March 27.—For eight years Mrs. Nellie Coffman hung onto Palm Springs like a stubborn dog clinging to a stick. If she hadn't done so, you never would have heard of the place.

From 1909 to 1917 her effort to run a resort hotel way out here on the desert was a touch-and-go affair. A few people came, but most people didn't.

Mrs. Coffman worked day and night. She kept books just like a farmer—she had two spikes, one for paid bills, the other for unpaid. At the end of each winter season, the unpaid stack was always the higher.

The Coffmans had some real estate in Santa Monica. Piece by piece this was sold to meet the bills at the end of each unsuccessful season on the desert.

Nobody had any faith in the thing but Mrs. Coffman. Today she gives the bulk of the credit to the two boys. But they themselves admit they couldn't see it, and anyhow they were away most of those tough early years, in school and then through the war.

Left Alone.

Dr. Coffman, who was running the sanitarium end of the thing in a tent colony, also could not vision the day when people would flock to the desert. He held on a few years, and then went back to the coast. Mrs. Coffman was on her own.

Through all those years she wouldn't give up. Her son Earl says of her today, "I don't know whether it was Mother's ability to see ahead, or just her phenomenal stubbornness, that made her hang on. Probably a little of both."

But hang on she did, and in 1917 things began to break her way. The virtues of Palm Springs had begun to get about the country by word of mouth. People began to hear of the quiet and restfulness of the desert, of the winter sunshine, of Mrs. Coffman's little Desert Inn.

The Flu Epidemic. In 1917 the new crop of war millionaires looked afield for vacation places and came to Palm Springs. And eastern families of old riches, cut off from Europe for the first time, also came. But most of all, the flu epidemic filled the place up.

Palm Springs kept itself without a flu death in the World War. Those that did get flu were immediately isolated. Los Angeles physicians sent their families to Palm Springs for safety. Everybody worked himself to death. In those days Mrs. Coffman worked until she felt she couldn't keep going. She was all alone now, too.

That was the toughest time, the crisis. And it was then that her beloved desert sustained her. Mrs. Coffman is not a dreamy woman, or one given to fancy flights of soul-soaring, but she is a person of fine sensitiveness—the kind who can draw courage from a flower or a thunderstorm. And her greatest strength and solace came from her love of the desert.

"In those terrible days in 1918," she says, "almost every evening just before sunset I'd go to a big sand mound south of town, and just sit there alone for about three-quarters of an hour, feeling the desert. Of course I didn't go every day, you know, but every time I could, I went. And I think that's what pulled me through."

To see her now—always cheerful, always friendly—you'd never guess that she was once a melancholy and depressed kind of person. She was before she came to the desert. Even now, when she goes to the coast on trips, the corners of her mouth go down and she's a changed person. She is happy only in the desert.

Her feeling for the desert is nothing. Admittedly, nothing she has thought up as an old sentimentalism now that her success is established. It is something as deep as one human's love for another, and it has been with her every moment since she set foot on these sands.

Autos Helped.

The first auto came to Palm Springs two years after Mrs. Coffman arrived. She says the unreliability of autos was all that kept her going for years.

"Seems like they were always getting out of whack," she says. (She almost had to come from Indiana to use that expression, "out of whack.")

"They'd get this far and then they'd get out of whack. It would take three weeks to get parts out here from Los Angeles. The people would stay a few days, then take the train to the city, then in a couple of weeks come back for the machine. That way we got two cracks at them."

"Things started going more rapidly after 1918. The two boys came home from the war, took a look, and saw what was about to happen. They went into business with their mother, and the three of them within the next decade built the tremendous Desert Inn as it is today—an investment of a million and a half."

Mother Coffman calls George the "watchdog of the treasury," because he handles the book and business end. Earl is the active manager. But Mrs. Coffman is not resting on her laurels by any means. She still dream and plans ahead. And she works. She spends all forenoon supervising the house-keeping and kitchen departments and chinning with the workers.

In the afternoons you'll find her around the lobby or the grounds most of the time. She loves to talk with the guests. She has been doing it for 30 years, and "I've never got tired of it. 'I'll talk to anybody who'll listen to me,' she says."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

TWO STORIES A story and a letter give me an opportunity to do a little piece about the Army and the flavor of it.

One of the stories is from Rabun Gap. It's what you might call a typical American story.

In January, 1917, as the United States approached entry into the first World War, a son was born into the home of William R. Ussery, at Dillard, Ga. The family was Presbyterian. The father was the son of a Confederate veteran.

Named for his father, the boy graduated from high school in 1934, and then went to work on the father's farm. There wasn't enough money to go to college. He worked on the farm for five years.

In 1939 any thinking young man knew this country had to enter the war to survive. The Air Corps at that time required two years' college education or its equivalent. (Today a high school education will do.) Young Bill Ussery got him some books and studied nights. (He had plenty of historic precedent: Lincoln with his pine knots.)

He took Air Corps examinations in college algebra, trigonometry, geometry and other college subjects. His off-hours study had been sound. He passed the examinations held at Maxwell Field, Ala. He survived the long weeks of training, in which more than 40 per cent of the candidates, a carefully selected lot, are "washed out."

Today First Lieutenant William R. Ussery Jr. is serving his country in foreign service.

I write about him because he is typical of thousands of Americans boys who, in order to serve their country, overcome handicaps and lack of opportunity to get into the Air Corps and become a fighter pilot. It takes courage and determination and ability.

PRIVATE, FIRST CLASS This second story is of an Emory University boy who has completed two months in service and who has been promoted to private, first class, the first step up.

"Well, tomorrow will mark my second month of service in the Army. It has been a very strange, unusual two months for me; new things, new places, new people and new faces, different from anything else I had ever known . . . an abrupt change, but so was Pearl Harbor."

"Strangely enough, how glad I am to be wearing a plain soldier's uniform, working in ways and under conditions I would never have known or considered in civilian life. If I had it all to do over I would walk into the same recruiting office and enlist in the same manner. It would have been nice to finish college and receive a commission, but in 16 or 18 months the war may be won or lost . . ."

"It is indeed a shame the way soldiers are treated by some few civilians. . . . However, that is the price we must pay for maintaining a democratic way of life. All the people in a land of 130,000,000 could not be taught its principles over night. Such teaching is a gradual process, one which takes more than one generation. If the soldiers were given much more consideration and authority the situation would be reversed, and those who work hard at home to keep us fed, to keep us clothed, and to keep us flying, would be taken advantage of. . . . Meanwhile, we have to win the war and then solve our domestic problems."

"Send me my birth certificate, as I intend to take the exams for flying school. I realize my eyes are too bad for flying, but there are chances for commissions with the other crews. . . ."

Private First Class John A. Beall, of Atlanta, wrote that as a part of a letter home. The thinking in it is a lot sounder than you will meet in quite a few comfortable offices housing some of our more serious thinkers. At least it isn't hysterical, as quite a lot of our big minds are today. (And a pity they are, too.)

THE AMERICAN DREAM The war should have done at least two or three things for the civilians. It should have shown them that despite the forlorn charges of some of our sorrowful lookers-on that modern youth isn't soft and effete.

It is a lot sounder than it ever was before. And possesses a lot more sense. I can show you college paper editorials on the American economic and industrial problems which are a lot more down-to-earth and common sense than those dashed off by men working at the trade.

It also shows that the old American dream isn't gone. A man still can toil on a farm all day, study at night and get somewhere in the fields where book learning is a requisite. It shows that men out of the hills, the fields and the plains, still can rally around in the old-time American tradition as they did when knocked down at Pearl Harbor—as they are doing in the Philippines at Bataan working at the trade.

They are just American soldiers—no different from the others who haven't been tested as yet.

The truth is, the human being, with few exceptions, is a rather clean, unassuming sort of person.

Especially the young human being.

It's the old man and the old lady who need your prayers and tears.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

You doubtless have noticed that all other animals communicate with one another by making various noises, as men do. Have you ever wondered how man's noises developed into speech?

The story of it goes something like this.

Early man first used his vocal equipment to make noises that expressed his emotions and desires. That's as far as he got for ages. Then he began to make other noises to designate objects—bear, tree, child, meat, and the other things that were part of his daily life.

His mind and his vocabulary developed together, for he had to have ideas before he needed words to express them, and he had to have words to express an idea before he could formulate it. Try as you will, you can't form a clear idea about anything unless you know the words that are necessary to clothe it or build it, or whatever you do to an idea.

So in time, as man's mind grew, he learned to make noises—that is to say words—that expressed values and hopes and standards and beliefs. In short, he learned to talk much as he does now, and his vocabulary, however limited, was sufficient to express any idea he was capable of understanding.

But, in the meantime, words had developed a power of their own. Association of ideas had made the word for an object seem the object itself. When man heard

Next Wednesday ushers in April, our spring month—perhaps.

It is marked by the traditional April Fool's Day, which also comes Wednesday.

Perhaps it is all our children have grown up and a desire to pay the parental nest that I can look ahead to April Fool's Day without apprehending that I'll be a bigger fool than on the other 364.

Time was when I'd expect to be aroused at 6:30 a. m. by a telephone call that didn't stay put. And salt in the sugar bowl and perhaps genuine flannel or slices of paper towel in the buckwheat cakes. But no more. Everybody's grown up now and we don't have any more fun, or buckwheat cakes.

The practical joke, even among the youngsters, appears to have passed out of the picture. Which is a good thing. Often it was cruel. Sometimes it was disastrous. An innocent practical joke sometimes resulted in a murder or manslaughter. Because the victim couldn't take it.

A sense of humor is a wonderful faculty—for the perpetrators of a practical joke. But often the object of this carefully plotted comedy lacks that sense. And then there's the devil to pay and no pitch hot, as the old saying goes.

Just now I'm thinking back to an April Fool's Day joke that was pulled off in a little Mississippi town not far south of Memphis. It backfired, happily.

This little town had its bad man. He had been out west and he had fit in. And he had sliced the ears off other bad men in Texas bars. And he had come home to strut around and throw fear into the natives. Which he did.

Bad Man's Jest.
On this particular morning of April 1 he strolled into the little town's drugstore and ordered a lemon-and-lime, with carbonated water.

The attendant at the fountain

April Fool's Day; Not as Funny as It Used To Be.

was a high school boy of 16, who looked upon the bad man, and trembled with fear. He didn't want to have no truck whatsoever with this bad man, but he mixed the lemon-and-lime the best he knew how.

The ferocious customer objected to the mixture. Too much lime, perhaps.

And just because it was April 1 he indulged in a bit of merry persiflage, to the amusement of bystanders.

"Son," he remarked, "that was a rotten drink. I believe you fixed it that way on purpose. I'm goin' home and get my bowie knife and come back here and carve both your ears off—close. You be a-waltin' for me, because if you ain't, I'll track you down."

Everybody got a good laugh out of that except the young soda jerk. He couldn't see the humor of it. This was a bad man with notches on his six-shooter. The youngster brooded over the problem.

Then he went back to the cubbyhole where he slept and found his boss' double-barreled shotgun. He fixed up a couple of cartridges with buckshot. He loaded the gun and leaned it up behind the soda fountain. He kept his eyes cocked toward the street.

About an hour after noon the bad man, who probably had forgotten the incident, came down the board sidewalk, toward the drugstore. And the young soda jerk, scared of losing his ears, stuck the gun around the side of the door and blew a sizeable hole through the bad man's abdomen, ending his heroic career.

No, he wasn't even arrested. The citizenry adjudged it justifiable homicide and everybody in town was relieved.

Some sage has remarked that there are three kinds of people to be scared of: An insane man, a dope fiend and a coward.

Maybe this scared youngster was a coward. But he performed a service for his community.

I sometimes think I would not care
If modern cars were elsewhere,
My shins are skinned, my shanks
are sore
Because my car is one of yore.
My friend, I urge you to beware
The running board that isn't there.

PRESIDENT ONLY MAN WHO KNOWS HOW TO WIN

Editor, Constitution: Having read the book "Defense Will Not Win This War," by Lieutenant Colonel W. F. Kernan, I most heartily agree with the writer of the leading editorial in the Constitution of March 23, 1942. As a matter of fact I gathered enough from the book and the "Pushers" thereof to cause me to place it in the "bunk" category.

The writer and the "pushers" of that book are in the same boat with the rest of us. They nor we do not know what will win this war. We do know that we have what it takes to win it but we do not know just exactly where it is at the moment any more than we know just exactly where our soul awaits the call of our Creator; but that both calls will be answered no patriot or Christian doubts in the least.

There is probably only one mortal on earth who (having seen the complete or nearly complete picture of the morass in which the world is wallowing) can tell us what it will take to win this war; that mortal is our President, and any man or interest who "blows smoke" in our President's eyes is rendering America, democracy and Christendom a distinct disservice.

Let us have exchange of views and opinions, yes, freely, that is democracy at work; but let us not make dogmatic statements and then permit some parties at interest having ulterior motives pervert those statements into a smoke screen wherewith to blind the helmsman of our ship of state. When the helmsman calls out "Avast" to "labor baiters" they must stop. When he calls the hand of the "economic royalists" they must stop. When he calls out to the "bigots," be they of labor, industry, capital, religion or of any other stripe, they must heed, because the helmsman has the chart before him and he knows the course better than any other mortal man.

A student of history who has made a vocation thereof may thank his vocation for his not being able to have a clearer view of the world's present course. The student of history who has made an avocation thereof may possibly have some slight conception of the world's present course because of the impartiality with which he studied that course. Let us keep this in mind.

ST. SIMON UNALTERED BY WAR CONDITIONS

Editor, Constitution: Various localities throughout the state have been making inquiries as to whether St. Simon Island will be closed to the usual flow of summer visitors. Some of the inquiries have been had been informed that the beaches of the island have been threaded with barbed-wire barricades and that it is patrolled by soldiers at every few yards. It seems incredible that such wild and utterly unfounded tales could gain circulation. But such is the hysteria that may accompany war, that no absurdity seems to be improbable.

St. Simon is pursuing its ordinary routines. It has had its share of winter visitors and new and commodious cottages are still being built, as well as the older ones freshened and being put into shape for the expected influx of summer visitors.

A convenient bus schedule is already operating with six daily trips to and from the island. Moreover, St. Simon is so situated that even the curtailed use of cars will not inconvenience the visitors. The stores, eating places, beach, playgrounds, movie pictures, bowling alleys, hotels and pier—where boats can be had for fishing—are all within more than easy walking distance from any point on either east beach or other sections of the island.

Certainly there is no other vacation resort so well adapted to having a good time without the usual use of cars. And with the soldiers from near-by camps using this for a recreation area, there will be plenty of fun and frolic for the young, and sunshine and quiet for those who desire it.

WANTS VOTE RECORD ON OUR CONGRESSMEN

Editor, Constitution: In a recent editorial in your paper you write of the record of Senator Clark, of Missouri. Senator Clark's record in the congress of the United States is, as you so ably stated, not a record that I think would stand a test before the patriotic electors of his state, if he had to face them in this crisis that we are now in.

However, since Senator Clark is from Missouri, and The Constitution is a Georgia newspaper and has always given the people of Georgia facts about our public servants, regardless of what political capacity they might be serving in, I think at this time you should give to the people of Georgia records of their representatives in the congress of the United States.

I think you will agree that every public official should stand on the public record that he himself has made, whether it be good or bad. I believe the people of Georgia would like to know how our senators and congressmen voted on the bills to fortify our islands, namely, Wake and Guam. Also on the appropriations asked by the President of the United States over a period of the past several years to bring the Army and Navy up to peace-time strength.

GIVE US BIG PARADE TO STIR WAR SPIRIT

Editor, Constitution: Since every one, young and old, is talking or writing about our country, I wish to make a suggestion. Give us a parade. A big parade with guns, big and little, with flags and kettle drums and big drums.

The spirit of George Washington, John Paul Jones and Andrew Jackson still slumbers in the breasts of the average American, notwithstanding the flesh-pots. When they get deeply stirred up they don't care anything about soft spots or life either. We have been simmering ever since W. P. G. Harding (not the one they called President) deflated the currency. The parade will help greatly and will grease the wheels of home preparedness.

THE TRANSGURED CHRIST.

Sunday's lesson, Matthew 17:1-20, Mark 9:2-29, and Luke 9:28-43, is the marvelous story of the transfiguration of Christ. The golden text: "And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God," Luke 9:43. Let me quote a few of the sentences from the passage in Luke:

"Jesus took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistening. And, behold, there talked with Him two men, which were Moses and Elias; who appeared in glory, and spoke of His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep; and when they were awake, they saw His glory, and the two men that stood with Him. . . . While he (Peter) thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them; and they feared as they entered into the cloud. And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is My beloved Son, hear Him. And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen."

What was the meaning of that scene? Dr. Hight C. Moore says: "It unveiled momentarily, indeed, but accurately, the Person of Christ which shone through His body and raiment, hinting of the glory He laid aside to come to earth and the glory that is to be His (and ours) in the future."

Why did Moses and Elijah appear with Him? Many answers may be given—too many for this limited space—but one may suffice to point the meaning of their presence. They were the two outstanding personalities of the Old Testament, Moses representing the Law; Elijah representing the Prophets. They talked of His "exodus" in Jerusalem, referring, of course, to His crucifixion—the fulfillment of the law and the prophets.

What was the significance of the Voice? The Father appeared, veiled from the human eyes in the cloud, to declare: "This is My Son, My Chosen; hear ye Him." On several other occasions God had spoken from Heaven, identifying Jesus as the Son, the Messiah; and now in this revelation of the redemptive plan, He again speaks.

We shall miss the application of the lesson if we do not go on to read the section that tells of Jesus returning with the three disciples to the lowly tasks of service at the foot of the mountain. Peter wanted to stay on the mountain, but Jesus led them again to the ministry to which He had called them. "Down in the valley with my Savior I would go." Christianity is Christ—Christ glorified, yes; but Christ serving human need. "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister; and to give Myself a ransom for many," Selah.

College To Get Dr. Sharp Portrait

The annual debate between the Pierce and Haygood literary societies will precede the presentation.

Negro Troops Included In AEF in Australia

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Secretary of War Stimson reported today that Negro troops were included in the American forces which have reached Australia.

The secretary declined to state their numbers or give additional information but told his press conference that Negroes were in virtually every branch and grade of the armed forces, and that their service ratio was about the same as their national ratio with the white population.

LAUNCHING SCHEDULED.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) The Delta Shipbuilding Corporation, of New Orleans, will launch its first Liberty ship tomorrow, the Maritime Commission said today. Ordinarily no prior announcement of the launching of merchant ships is authorized, but the commission made an exception because it is the first launching by Delta.

Unified Command Set Up in War On Submarines

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The command of Army planes hunting U-boats off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts was turned over to the Navy by an order announced today as a new move to increase the effectiveness of the war on submarines.

NAMED—T. O. Tabor Jr., Elberton merchant, yesterday was appointed deputy administrator of the Georgia Defense Savings Staff, taking over the post previously held by Captain Arthur Cheatham, who was named assistant to State Administrator Marion H. Allen, revenue collector.

Nazis Ordered To Hold Firm At Six Points

Germans Reported Clearing Way for Spring Drive on Reds.

BERN, March 27.—(AP)—The German army has been ordered to hold six main points on the Russian front at all costs while Nazi transportation experts effect the difficult movement of new supplies for a spring offensive now reported timed for the third week in April, according from both German and neutral areas indicated tonight.

The points which the Nazis expect their troops to hold against Russian attack which in some cases approaches encirclement are: Staraya Russa, below Lake Ilmen, where the 16th German army long has been in desperate straits; Vyazma, bastion of the deep salient on the front west of Moscow; Orel, Kursk and Kharkov, consecutive forward positions on a north-south line protecting the Germans in the Ukraine and Donets basin, and Tuganog, advanced Nazi position on the Sea of Azov, on the route to the Caucasus.

The hardships which stand in the way of adequate supplies for spring offensive action by the Germans were emphasized by Berlin and Rome correspondents of Swiss newspapers. However, the Neue Zürcher Zeitung wrote, the Germans believe they now see a way to end their difficulties and take the initiative.

Military observers in Istanbul, predicting Germany would make its new smash at Russia in the third week of April, said there was some possibility of a concurrent thrust at the United Nations' Mediterranean area, perhaps from Greece, Crete and Rhodes via Cyprus and Syria.

Mystery Story Writer, Carolyn Wells, Dies

NEW YORK, March 27.—(AP)—Carolyn Wells, mystery story writer and author of the "Mystery of the Flower-Fifth Avenue hospital," died yesterday at the Flower-Fifth Avenue hospital. In 1929 she wrote "The Technique of the Mystery Story," considered by writers the most authoritative story of its kind at the time. She was known for her gaiety and wit—she started her career with humor writing and ended with mystery—although afflicted with deafness since girlhood. In 1932, after a serious heart ailment, she wrote an article on how it felt to have two years to live—and then recovered.

The order, issued Wednesday by General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, fleet commander in chief, was disclosed by the War and Navy Departments, which asserted in identical communications that co-operation already was "close and effective" in other respects.

The Army air units were made subject to orders of naval commanders of the "sea frontiers" to end any uncertainty over control of the weapons used in the anti-submarine campaign.

Andrews in Charge. The Atlantic "sea frontier," extending from the Canadian border to the Caribbean, is commanded by Read Admiral Adolphus Andrews, who was relieved of short administrative duties ten days ago to devote his full attention to the anti-submarine war. The newest action toward unity of command closely followed a complaint by North Carolina's governor, "J. M. Broughton, that a 'shocking lack of co-operation' existed between the Army and Navy and that the war on U-boats was 'wholly inadequate' and 'frequently inept.' To this complaint, directed in telegrams to Secretary Stimson, of the War Department, and Secretary Knox, the official announcement made no reference.

Unity of command, it was noted, "already exists for all Army and Navy forces in the Hawaiian Islands and the Caribbean."

Operating Centers Combined. Off the western coast of the United States, the task of guarding against enemy sea activities is divided between Rear Admiral John W. Greenleaf, commander of the western sea frontier, and Rear Admiral C. S. Freeman, the northwest sea frontier commander.

In voicing reassurance that in general the co-operation between Army air forces and the Navy had been "close and effective," the communications said that "in most ports, the operating centers of these commands have already been combined in one room."

"The new system of operating control under one service will eliminate any possible uncertainty regarding jurisdictional limits and will insure the smooth and effective working of our intensified anti-submarine campaign in the waters off our coasts," it was added.

The new order appeared aimed primarily at intensifying the war on U-boats off the Atlantic coast, where shipping has been ravaged most dangerously.

Off the east coast and in the Caribbean, the Navy has announced that it has the loss of some 71 ships, 47 of them off the Atlantic coast. Between January 1 and February 23, the Navy has reported three submarines sunk, four believed damaged, and 49 others attacked.

Close Co-operation Noted in Hawaii

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Close co-operation between the Army and Navy is an outstanding part of the greatly strengthened defenses of Hawaii, Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy said today.

McCloy, who returned recently from a trip to the west coast and Hawaii, during which he studied particularly the strength of Japanese from defense areas, said that a "very marked" development of air installations was the most impressive factor in the strengthened Hawaiian defenses.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, naval commander, and Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, commanding the Army's ground and air forces, are "practically sitting in each other's laps," McCloy said at a press conference.

Writ Is Issued In Wages Case

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood yesterday ordered James J. Cerniglia, Atlanta produce dealer, to show cause why he should not be held in criminal contempt for failure to comply with the provisions of the wages and hours law.

Cerniglia and a group of other produce dealers were enjoined by officials of the wages and hours law from paying less than 30 cents an hour to employees, from working them more than 40 hours a week without paying time and a half overtime.

In a petition for an order to show cause, United States Attorney Lawrence S. Camp held Cerniglia had violated provisions of the injunction, granted by consent decree in May, 1940.

DEFENSE CHIEFS—Brigadier General E. G. Peyton, right, yesterday told a meeting of air raid wardens and city and county defense chiefs that Atlanta's air raid control center already is operating. He is speaking at a meeting held at the city hall to attempt to end the row over command of the control unit. Those present created a mediation body to solve the problem. At the extreme left is Charles Currie, chairman of the Fulton County Defense Committee, whom the county group named to command the control center.

divided commands," he added. "I will cheerfully tender my resignation if we can set up a committee of three from no office holders to take charge of defense."

Currie pointed out the control center must be established and properly manned and commanded at once.

General Peyton said a center has been established temporarily at the city hall and the "best control center in the United States" will be opened in about 30 days at the municipal auditorium.

"We are well organized and all units need more training, we are now ready to function," Peyton added.

Papy proposed that training be prosecuted under separate commands as at present, and that command of the control center not be considered at the time being, but postponed. He said the various units could be consolidated at a later date.

Several air raid wardens, zone commanders, training directors and others urged sufficient funds be provided to purchase instructional textbooks and needed equipment. They told of how they have been forced to "dig into our own pockets to buy stamps and post cards."

Jackson insisted all controversy be abandoned.

Among other speakers at the meeting were M. A. Wilson, third zone commander; O. D. Bartlett, also of the third zone; Will Beck, civilian commander of the first zone; Earle Smith, training officer of the third district; Ben S. Parker, air raid warden; Major Joseph Herring, of the eighth zone.

Earlier in the day Jackson Lyle and other city leaders conferred with Robert Troutman, chairman of the state defense committee, and Major John Goodwin, state commissioner of public safety.

Troutman told the committee that if Papy would recommend a separate command for the county and Atlanta he would approve it, and this appeared to be another possible proposal through which the controversy can be ended if efforts of the arbitration group are not entirely successful.

Banish Cartels, Daughter Says Arnold Urges She'll Carry On U. S. Congress Work of Sarg

Registration of Pacts With Foreign Firms Asked.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold asked congress today to aid in banishing cartels from American business life, at the same time proclaiming a willingness to "let bygones be bygones if we can clean this thing up."

Among other recommendations, Arnold proposed that all agreements between American and foreign business firms be registered with the government, and a full explanation of their purpose given.

Testifying primarily about relationships between the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and I. G. Farben, of Germany, which resulted in a consent decree and payment of fines by the company, Arnold told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that this case was only a "guinea pig" which illustrated a widespread condition.

Arnold charged yesterday that Standard, under a cartel agreement, blocked synthetic rubber production in the United States by turning over improved manufacturing processes to I. G. Farben before United States entry into the war, and withholding them from American firms. Under a consent decree this week, the company agreed to make its synthetic rubber patents available to American industry free.

The anti-trust chief said the Justice Department believed that I. G. Farben, the German dye trust, "had more than 100 cartel agreements with business firms in this country."

"I do not think," he testified, "that it is an extreme statement to say that in most of the basic war materials we find similar cartel agreements."

In calling for the registration of agreements with foreign firms, he said: "These cases exist but it's hard to discover them without a grand jury investigation. As you know, there is always a great deal of pressure against starting a grand jury investigation against companies engaged in national defense."

"I think we need that kind of dragnet and I think we need it now."

March Tax Return At $2,802,127,962
WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Surpassing unofficial Treasury estimates, March income and excess profits tax collections today reached $2,802,127,962.

Before the record-breaking revenues started rolling in on March 16, the Treasury guess was $2,750,000,000. With a few days' collections yet to record, the month's total may be nearer $3,000,000,000.

James A. Mills, Famous News Writer, Dies

Noted AP Figure Was Friend, Confidant of Notables.

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.
NEW YORK, March 27.—(AP)—When death came to James A. Mills at Ventura, Cal., today at the age of 58 it robbed us of one of the striking figures of our time.

Few men have traveled so far or lived such a life of thrills and danger and adventure as had the ubiquitous Mills in his search for headlines for the newspapers of America. But he was more than a famous correspondent of the Associated Press.

This quiet, unassuming gentleman was the friend and confidant of a host of notables, ranging from kings and queens to humble offsprings of the soil. Indeed, it may not be an exaggeration to say that he had as wide an acquaintance throughout the world as any other person.

I must qualify that word "acquaintance" for Jim, as we always have called him, was a man of friendships. To meet him was to like him, to know him was to love him. And so it was that many came to place their trust in his loyalty and great breadth of understanding. In my own travels in many lands I have crossed and recrossed Mills' trail, and times without number the first inquiry made of me by all sorts of folk, from dignitaries to doormen, was if I knew Jim Mills.

Jim long had known that he was condemned to die, but he was sure that when the call came he wasn't afraid. He always had met the best of his life, and he was a smiling smile of his as though death were the least of his worries. As a matter of fact I believe it was, for he had faced it many times in very terrible forms, and we shall think of him as meeting it with his smiling smile.

It would be difficult to name a spot outside the poles which Jim Mills hadn't visited, written about and photographed. Indeed, his friend Mahatma Gandhi once remarked that when he reached the place he expected to see all the reporters looking for a story. I guess the Mahatma spoke a greater truth than he realized when he made his little joke.

Metal Sign Output Is Ordered Halted

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) The War Production Board today ordered production of metal signs halted after July 1 and directed sign manufacturers to effect a 50 per cent reduction in their use of iron and steel during the next three months.

Simultaneously, WPB froze all stocks of iron and steel now held by the sign producers and prohibited them from selling or delivering any materials except with specific WPB authorization or to persons having defense preference ratings, or to the RFC.

Included under the order are all signs of 36 square inches or larger containing at least 5 per cent metal by weight, including billboards, electric, indoor, neon, porcelain, enamel and store front signs.

BEES WILL GET SUGAR. WASHINGTON, March 27.—(AP) Sugar refiners were authorized today to fill all the sugar requirements of bee keepers and the United Service Organizations. In an amendment to the sugar priority order, the War Production Board provided that apiarists might obtain all the sugar needed for feeding bees at seasons of the year when nectar is not available from blossoms.

British Consider Plan To Drop Birth Rule for House of Lords

LONDON, Saturday, March 28.—(AP)—The Daily Herald said today that the government is considering a plan to abolish the birth qualification for membership in the house of lords and to set up instead a second chamber of members drawn from the various professions.

The members of the new chamber would be qualified to act jointly as the nation's brain trust, the newspaper said. A committee under Sir John Anderson, lord president of the council and member of the war cabinet, is drafting the proposal for early submission to the war cabinet, the Herald said.

"It is part of a comprehensive review of constitutional and electoral problems recently put in hand by the government," the paper added.

Currie Asserts Peyton Quit A Week Ago

New Head Asks End to Politics in Defense Setup.

Urging that volunteer workers insist on carrying out regulations set up by the Office of Civilian Defense and that political sabotage of civilian defense be stopped, Charles J. Currie, chairman of Fulton county civilian defense, issued a statement yesterday in which he declared Brigadier General E. G. Peyton tendered his resignation as commander of the City Defense Council more than a week ago.

Currie's statement in full follows: "When I was asked by the chairman of civilian defense for the fifth congressional district to volunteer by services as chairman of the Fulton county committee in charge of civilian defense, I did so in belief that everyone was sincerely interested in getting this vital organization in operation. We were given the National Office of Civilian Defense regulations and through the committee attempted to set up the plan in the whole county just as the national office, recommends.

"There is no provision in the national regulations for municipal limits, only a provision for the county to be divided into zones in respect of municipal lines."

Since Mayor LeCraw wanted a separate organization headed by his former commanding officer, the retired General Peyton, we acquiesced to his wishes in the interest of harmony. That was for training and organization.

"We now have reached the test period. The training must be completed quickly and we must have tests and practices. In order to do this the entire organization of 23 zones must be fused under one command to be operated out of a control center."

General Peyton submitted his resignation to the City Defense Council a week ago. He told us on the county committee Thursday he thought a county-wide command should be established right away. We did just that and for a temporary period I agreed to shoulder the duties of commander. The general voted for the motion enthusiastically.

"If the volunteer workers who are crying for action and system will begin to insist that the O. C. regulations be followed and the political sabotage of the civilian defense effort be stopped it will be a language everybody can understand. We must have a harmonious and co-ordinated civilian defense organization under one command in Fulton county and we must have it now."

to authorize the purchase of 5,720 chairs for $24,000 and 1,000 portable chairs for the amphitheater at $2.88 each. However, some doubts were expressed as to whether the successful bidders could secure a priority for the chairs.

County Purchasing Agent Mose Holland said he had awarded the first contract for the 5,720 chairs to the American Seating Company, of which C. M. (Mac) Bolen is Atlanta representative, because the company's chairs were the only ones meeting the elaborate specifications.

He said specifications had come to him from Park Superintendent Carl Mills and that he had asked Building Inspector Frank Eaves to select the best chair among the five samples submitted after he had advertised for bids.

Holland said that the Southern Desk Company bid $19,162 on the chairs and that the Erwin Seating Company $21,450. He added that

NEW CAMP WHEELER M. P.—Ace, German shepherd, has been assigned officially to the military police at Camp Wheeler, so his future activities may be controlled. The dog went A. W. O. L. on a jeep convoy last October and returned a few days ago.

Camp Wheeler Dog Returns After 5-Month Trip on Jeeps

CAMP WHEELER, Ga., March 27.—(AP)—The same fondness for Army jeeps which took a German shepherd dog away on an unauthorized five-month excursion has brought him back.

And to control his future activities, the Camp Wheeler Public Relations Office announced today, the dog has been attached officially to the Wheeler military police detachment.

The new MP belongs to Lieutenant Phil A. Adams, of the MP detachment here. His name is Ace.

Last October Ace saw a jeep going places. Ace likes nothing better than to ride a jeep. So he jumped aboard. The jeep happened to be one of a convoy passing through to maneuvers in the Carolina. It was the last anyone here saw of Ace until this week.

Then Sergeant Homer D. Smith, directing traffic for a convoy, spotted a dog he thought was Ace, riding atop a jeep.

Smith called Adams.

Adams found the convoy commander.

"The dog is named Wolf," he said, explaining he had made friends with him in a Louisiana camp weeks ago.

Lieutenant Adams urged a test. The other agreed.

"Wolf!" he called. The dog came running.

"Ace," cried Lieutenant Adams. The dog skidded to a stop, wheeled toward Adams, leaped on him, whimpering with delight.

"Hi ya, Ace!" patted Adams. "Goodbye, Wolf," said the convoy officer.

Fulton Budget Faces Cut of 25 Per Cent

Income From Fines, Fees, Marriage Licenses Shows Drop.

Fulton county must cut its expenses 25 per cent, according to the 1942 budget adopted yesterday by the county commissioners.

Commissioners groaned when they saw the figures presented by County Auditor James L. Respass, and several of them said it would be impossible to carry on essential public business for the rest of the year, but the budget was carried unanimously.

Respass said that county's revenue from certain sources might possibly increase by $150,000, but pointed out that, due to the war, income from fines and fees from suits by companies selling merchandise on the installment plan and from marriage licenses would be reduced substantially.

According to Respass, the maximum amount the county must spend under the law in 1942 is $4,863,866.45. If the present rate of spending is kept up, he added, the expenditures would exceed that sum by $590,640.

This means, says the budget report, that expenditures over which the commissioners have control, must be reduced 25 per cent. Other expenditures, such as those fixed by judges and others operating under state law, have increased during the year, he said.

The reports show salaries of county employees totaling $2,337,450.12, are $175,234.99 higher in 1942. No recommendation that salaries be cut is made.

Under yesterday's budget, the public works department must reduce estimated expenses on items over which the commissioners have control from $686,400.70 to $498,750. The county police are cut from $58,193.84 to $45,000; paupers and benevolences from $72,820 to $54,431; parks from $89,327.33 to $58,125. Various other county expenditures over which the commission has control also were cut 25 per cent.

an umbrella carried by one of her husband's lawyers, H. A. Allen.

While O'Neal aimed his lenses, Evans charged him, according to witnesses, tugging at the front part of the camera while the photographer clung to the rear.

Witnesses said Mrs. Evans cried: "Daddy, Daddy, don't do that!"

"The judge announced," Dr. Evans explained later, "that no photographs were to be taken about the court. I don't care myself, but Mrs. Evans objected. She's never been in court until this hearing came up. I saw that boy snap the camera at her and shout: 'Don't take that picture!' He snapped one anyway and I grabbed him and shook him up a little. I'll pay for his camera, even if he wants to bring suits against me."

During the melee, Attorney William Schley Howard, of the Evans counsel, lost his boutonniere. He was with the Evanses as they left the courthouse and said he lost his carnation in dodging a truck.

When the Evanses left the courthouse after the end of the hearing, they were followed by half of the courthouse employees. Two other Journal photographers were waiting outside and flashed their bulbs.

The 61-year-old ex-wizard started for them, while Mrs. Evans and her lawyers got into a limousine, but the photographers eluded him. He then broke into a grin and climbed into the car.

Counterattacks Repulsed.

Other Russian dispatches today, relating the course of continued German counterattacks, said that the Red army itself was exerting increasing care in fortifying captured towns and that this had been the deciding factor in the repulse of counterattacks.

At one of the settlements retaken by the Russians on the central front, the Germans counterattacked four times without avail. It was stated, using thousands of men and tanks.

The Russian accounts told also of heavy German losses in attempted counterattacks on the fronts northwest and southwest of Moscow, and described the destruction of two Junkers-52 transports on the airfield at Staraya Russa.

The German air force lacks fighters to protect these transports which are bringing supplies to the Nazi 16th army in flights of 10 and 12 planes, the Russians said.

HOBOKEN, N. J., March 27.—(AP)—Police took into custody today Henry Kohlhaas, identified by Detective Frank Mooney as a sparring partner for Max Schmeling, when the German boxer fought in America.

Subversive literature was found in the 29-year-old longshoreman's room when police moved in on him at the request of the FBI, Mooney said. Kohlhaas was booked as a potentially dangerous enemy alien and held for the FBI.

Million Yards of Dirt To Be Moved in Project.

Bids for grading the site for the Bell bomber plant, near Marietta, will be opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Army Area Engineers' office, 294 Peachtree street, it was announced last night.

Present specifications for the plant, which will employ 40,000 people in assembling bombers, call for moving more than 1,000,000 yards of dirt.

Condemnation proceedings for the property are now under way, and officials of the engineering office expect to hear momentarily from Washington that they have been completed.

The office has authority to accept a bid on the grading work, and will award the contract if an acceptable bid is received.

Work on the project is expected to get under way within a week, if a contract is awarded, it was said.

Cripps, Gandhi Participate in Lengthy Talk

Possibility of Two Indian Dominions Is Believed Growing.

NEW DELHI, India, March 27.—(AP)—Sir Stafford Cripps and Mohandas K. Gandhi discussed for more than two hours today the British plan for Indian self-government which, reliable sources disclosed, might conceivably result in two Indian dominions.

Wearing his inevitable loin cloth and with a shawl about his frail brown shoulders, the little Indian leader arrived alone by automobile and was greeted cordially by the tall British emissary.

The conversation that ensued was the longest Sir Stafford has had with anyone since he arrived. Departing, Gandhi declined to discuss what was said, explaining he had taken a vow of silence.

He was in high spirits, teasing Cripps about the presence of many photographers and accusing the British envoy of vanity. Gandhi is expected to remain in New Delhi over Sunday, to attend the important executive meeting of the All-India Congress Working Committee, from which may come the first concrete evidence of congress reaction to the Cripps proposals.

Other qualified informants predicted the Cripps proposals, when made public, would disclose that Britain is offering India a post-war federation of dominion status with each province or state free to decide for itself whether it will join the federation or remain outside.

Provinces remaining outside would be free to form another federation of similar status. Hence two dominions could result.

say for themselves. There have been border wars, put down by the British. But no invasion of her shores."

Miss Collar's Bridal Attire Accented by Gift of Groom

A beautiful pearl and amethyst lavalier, which was a gift of the groom, Miss Virginia Fraser Collar, yesterday afternoon when she and Marion Thomas Clark were united in marriage at 5 o'clock at the Emory University Theological chapel. Rev. William Hughes Clark, the groom's father, assisted by Dr. W. A. Smart, performed the marriage ceremony.

While the guests assembled, a program of music was presented by Mrs. S. S. Forester, pianist, and Jack Burnette, violinist. Serving as ushers were Ensign Carleton Collar, of Savannah, the bride's brother, Dr. William E. Johnson, of Carrollton; Robert Rohrer, of Brookshire Jr. The groom's brother, Captain W. P. Clark, acted as best man.

Miss Gene Staley, the maid of honor, and Mrs. Charles Wesley Clark, the bride's sister, who was matron of honor, were gowned alike in bouffant daffodil yellow marquisette models. The gathered bodice were posed over lace and featured bishop sleeves. They wore tiaras of fresh spring blossoms tied with blue ribbon streamers.

William Franklin Collar gave his lovely young daughter in marriage. The bride's radiant beauty was further enhanced by her exquisite white marquisette gown fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and bishop sleeves. The bouffant skirt was gathered to the shirred bodice by two rows of ruffles. Her finger-tip length veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair by a coronet of chanted lace. She carried a white prayer book showered with gardenias and swainsons.

The Collar residence on Harvard formed the setting for the reception at which Mr. and Mrs. Collar entertained. Mrs. Collar received her guests wearing a becoming green crepe gown with a petunia straw hat and a shoulder spray of gardenias. Mrs. William Hughes Clark chose for her son's marriage a chic crepe gown accented by a small flower hat and a shoulder cluster of gardenias.

Graceful arrangements of ivory, pale pink Oriental magnolia blossoms, and jonquils and spirea decorated the reception rooms. The bride's table was centered with a heart-shaped wedding cake embedded in pink roses and ferns. Silver candelabra, which held lighted pink tapers, flanked the cake. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Forrest Smith, Miss Eleanor Bryan, Mrs. William B. Schreeder and Miss Ann Gellerstedt.

Later in the evening Mr. Clark and his bride departed for a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Oxford. For traveling Mrs. Clark donned a Stone mountain blue two-piece suit worn with a beige and brown plaid topcoat. A brown straw sailor and a shoulder cluster of gardenias completed her attire.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Buford Baskin, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Johnson, of Carrollton; Miss Ethel Adams, Miss Lela Veese, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Baesom, Dr. and Mrs. Ed Lawson, Miss Elizabeth Jennings, of Milledgeville; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hot Chocolate Is Tops With the Soldiers On the Pacific Coast

By Damon Runyon.

We are somewhat surprised to learn that the soldiers of today on the Pacific coast prefer hot chocolate to all other drinks.

We should not say that this argues deterioration in young American manhood. Many authorities contend that hot chocolate has nutritive values that will cause hair to grow on the chest. However, we do say that it indicates a vast change in soldier taste since the days when a brew concocted of old leather and rusty nails was deemed a delicious beverage by the fighting lads.

Our information about the chocolate comes from the VACS of southern California, otherwise the Volunteer Army Canteen Service. This organization is made up of ladies who are supporting canteens for the soldiers in the Army camps. It is one of several organizations of ladies in southern California that are doing similar work for the soldiers and sailors.

These organizations reflect in some measure the war spirit of the civilian population of southern California, which we think is higher than in any other area of the United States. Theoretically, southern California is a theater of war and has been subject to various alarms, real and imaginary, but the civilian population keeps cool, calm and collected, as Jim Farley used to say, and goes about the business of preparing various defensive measures without undue excitement.

The ladies of southern California are particularly active in war work of various kinds. Many are employed in the defense plants. Many are training for nursing, ambulance driving and work in other fields of hard service. Then there are hundreds who are devoting their time and money to the welfare of the service men, which is where the VACS come in. The ladies of the Hollywood movie colony are especially busy in this department.

Mrs. Jack Lawrence, whose father was commander at Fort MacArthur before his death, is one of the leaders of the VACS and among those assisting her are Anita Loos, Dena Harburger, Mrs. Leo Spitz, Anita Louise, Mildred Knopf, Mrs. Jack Cummings, Mrs. Richard Barthelmess, Mrs. Edith Wilkerson, Mrs. L. B. Mayer and Mrs. Jack Benny, all prominent socially or professionally in movie circles.

The VACS have two working canteens at Fort MacArthur, one on the upper reservation taking care of 1,200 to 1,500 men daily, the other on the lower reservation, which is geared to provide for 2,000 men daily. Three more canteens are to be opened, one at the Fourth Interceptor Command, where the fighting fliers keep watch and ward over the skyways over Los Angeles. The USO, which is the government organization, takes care of the soldiers in the towns, but the VACS look after them in camps.

Movie stars like George Raft, Cary Grant and Mickey Rooney are assisting the VACS, and many civilians of slightly less renown are adding their efforts. For example, Joe Lynch, the Los Angeles prize fight promoter, has arranged a battle between Jackie Wilson and Pedro Ortega at the old Olympic Club for March 31 as a benefit for the VACS and one movie star bought $5,000 worth of tickets right off the bat. The indications are that more tickets will be sold than the house can hold.

The big problem of the VACS is getting more canteens opened and then providing transportation. The members are using their own automobiles and station wagons for vehicles for war work are getting scarce in southern California, what with the numerous demands.

It was a VACS who told us that three times as much hot chocolate is served at the Army canteens as any other drink. She said plenty of coffee was provided but that the soldiers just naturally prefer the chocolate.

We might feel a bit uneasy about an Army that is training on hot chocolate and ping-pong had we not been advised that the most terrific hot chocolate addict at Fort MacArthur, and at the same time, the best ping-pong player, is also a master hand at the pad-roll with a pair of dice.

Whole Wheat Flour Beats Enriched

By Dr. William Brady.

Nutrition authorities now generally agree that the everyday diet of most people (poor, middle or well-to-do) in this country is deficient in calcium, phosphorus, iron, vitamin D and vitamin B complex. The movement to "enrich" white flour by adding certain synthetic B complex factors (such as B₁, or thiamin) and nicotinic acid and iron appears to be petering out at present, but anyway it was a gesture that indicated how conscious our nutrition authorities are of the faulty nutrition of the majority of our people.

"Enriching" white flour by adding such vitamin factors and mineral elements to it would be only a partial restoration at best—after all it is rather silly to go to the expense of removing such components of wheat in the process of milling and refining, and then go to all the additional expense of "restoring" some of the nutrients so removed, isn't it?

It is a great deal simpler and far better for human nutrition and well-being to rescue a bag, a bushel, half-bushel, peck or even a few pounds of plain wheat before it gets to the mill, take it home and eat it in place of at least some of the items of your daily diet made largely of refined white flour. I hesitate to mention the many health benefits one may derive from eating plain wheat, lest the uninitiated reader assume I have gone mad about it. But the reasons for eating plain wheat and wheat germ are set forth, along with tested recipes, in a pamphlet I am glad to send any one who asks for it ("Wheat to Eat") and provides a stamped envelope bearing his address.

Although everybody could do with an increased intake of natural vitamin B complex (in which wheat is rich) probably no one needs it more than the little stranger in the 280 days before he or she arrives to take command of the household. It is of utmost importance, therefore, that the prospective mother shall have an optimal daily intake of vitamin B complex in one form or another, not only for her own well being but for the well being of the little stranger.

Here perhaps we should quote a paragraph from the booklet "Preparing for Maternity."

"If the prospective mother fails to get enough vitamin B complex she herself is more likely to suffer with pernicious vomiting, polyneuritis and anemia; weakness and retardation of uterine contractions in labor; failure of lactation. The baby is more likely to have congenital pyloric obstruction (stenosis), according to Moore, Brodie, Dennis, Hope and others."

Finally, it is my opinion that the chief underlying cause of that common complaint or functional weakness or bad habit, constipation, is deficiency of vitamin B complex.

MY DAY: A Granddaughter Has a Birthday

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CHICAGO, Ill., Thursday.—Last evening, before I left my daughter's home, we celebrated very gaily at a joint birthday party. My eldest granddaughter and my son-in-law, John, were born on the same day, and so they share their birthday festivities. Sissie is 15, which has always seemed to me a very important birthday.

I felt I was as old as I have ever been since. The autumn of that birthday, I left my grandmother's and went abroad to a school and was more independent during the next three years than I have ever been since. As I look back on those three years, I think that I learned and matured more mentally in that time than in any other period of my life. To me, of course, today my granddaughter seems far younger than I was at her age. Yet, I imagine that, given the same responsibility, she would be quite as capable of coping with whatever circumstances arose.

On my 15th birthday my grandmother gave me a ring which had been given to her on her 15th birthday. She had given it to my mother at the age of 15 and after my mother's death, put it away and kept it for me. When Anna was 15, I gave it to her, and yesterday she gave it to her daughter. That is really quite a record. I think, for things seldom go through five generations without being lost somewhere along the line.

I took the plane for New York at 8:30 last night with the promise that the weather was "routine" all the way. I always receive that news with satisfaction and am very glad when it proves true. On this trip, on the whole, the weather has been remarkably smooth whenever I have been flying, though we did have a few little "bumps" on the way into Los Angeles over the mountains. I was very happy to leave my daughter this time in her home instead of a hospital. Though she will have to be careful for a little while, she is certainly on the road to complete recovery.

It was sad news to read of two more of our destroyers being lost. I cannot bear to think of the many women whose hearts ache for the boys and men who are lost with each of these ships; as well as any one of the airplanes that fail to come back from a raid, or that crash somewhere in this country or in foreign parts. These days are terrible ones for the men themselves and for the women who wait at home for news. So many of the boys are very young and, under ordinary circumstances, would have their whole lives still before them. I wonder if women in every country are making up their minds that out of this war there shall come some kind of permanent peace.

Mickey Rooney Teams With Hedy Lamarr In New Love Drama

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, March 27. (INS)—Who do you think is going to make love to Hedy Lamarr (I mean in the movies, of course)? Mickey Rooney, no less. Joe Pasternak outlined a story that he is having written for Hedy and Mickey called "The Countess and the Bellboy." Hedy plays a socialite with Mickey a typical American. She teaches him hand-kissing and he teaches her slang. I talked with Joe on the set of "Tulip Time" and I couldn't take my eyes off Marsha Hunt. For years she has been playing the ugly duckling, but at long last the ugly duckling has become the beauty of the screen—and, moreover, has developed into a great actress.

Joe told me M-G-M has great plans for Marsha. I watched her, Van Heflin and Isabel Elsom do a scene for Frank Borzage. Miss Elsom, remember, was in "Ladies in Retirement." I was surprised to see Peggy Moran on the set in makeup. She is taking Ann Rutherford's place in the role of Albert, one of the daughters in "Tulip Time" who are called by boy's names. Ann has the measles and must stay home until the spots go away.

Little did I think when I saw Julie Hayden and Sir Cedric Hardwicke in the stage play, "Shadow and Substance" that it would ever be a Charlie Chaplin production. Well, you know, Charlie does go serious once in a while and "Shadow and Substance" is an example. He is now writing the adaptation and will produce and direct it, but he will have no acting part. You may see an unknown girl in this movie. Charlie usually has an unknown girl, for instance, Paulette Goddard, Myrna Kennedy, Georgia Hale and Virginia Cherrill all made their first screen appearances for him.

After a huddle at Paramount Katharine Hepburn was sent a wire asking if she would be interested in "Frenchman's Creek." This is the first of the David Lewis productions. David also has "Storm" and "The Hour Before Dawn," so it's easy to see he not only likes Katharine Hepburn's place in name but in fact. These three novels are among Paramount's most valuable holdings. I, some way, have a feeling that when the cameras start rolling on Hepburn's "Frenchman's Creek" best seller Madeleine Carroll will be in the femme lead. She is more the type than the staccato Katie.

Good English Is Essential To Success

In getting an office job, your training—though important—isn't all! Your background is considered, too, and your English quickly tells about that.

If you say "I BEEN employed two years . . . ANYWAYS, I'd like to try" you give yourself a poor rating.

As any one can easily learn, it's correct to say "I HAVE BEEN" or "I'VE BEEN." And it's incorrect to tack an "s" on "ANYWAY" or "SOMEWHERE" or "ANYWHERE."

Receptionists, secretaries, switchboard operators—all must meet the public. If you want such a job, check your speech.

A common error is the double negative. Many people say "I CAN'T hardly do that. . . . There ISN'T but one left."

But don't YOU get in the habit of saying, correctly, "I CAN hardly do that. . . . There IS but one."

Another common error is confusing words that sound alike, such as "likely" and "liable." The first refers to an uncertain but probable event: "It is likely to rain." The second, a possible unpleasant event: "She is liable to faint."

Send 15 cents (plus one cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH," to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. We'll plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Vitamins A and D Battle Cold Infection

By Ida Jean Kain.

still be an easy prey to the cold bug. If so, start eating more of them to build up your reserve.

When your diet measures up to the requirements and you are, nevertheless, susceptible to colds, it may be that you need more than average amounts. In that case, take a haliver oil capsule daily—one that furnishes 10,000 units of vitamin A and 400 units of vitamin D.

Once your resistance is high, you are not nearly so apt to catch a cold when exposed to one. But if you do come down with a cold, you belong at home. Don't mix with crowds, or your friends and business associates, and thus pass your germs along. Every time you sneeze, the germs travel about 12 feet; it is much better for you to remain at home a couple of days than to be the cause of spreading your cold.

While you are about it, stay in bed, drink plenty of water, and go on a light diet. Have plenty of fruits, fruit juices, hot soups, and vegetables. Skip the heavy foods. You are not supposed to feed a cold. In fact, over-eating may be a predisposing factor.

Kennel Club Sponsors Handling Class Sunday

Professional Advice Offered Novice Handlers Who Want To Enter Show April 9-10.

By RUTH STANTON COGILL.

Atlanta dog owners who have never enjoyed the thrills of the show ring but wish to enter their dogs in the Atlanta Kennel Club dog show at the city auditorium April 9-10 will have a rare opportunity Sunday afternoon to get professional instruction on the proper way for Fido to entice the judge. For the first time the Kennel Club will sponsor handling classes for novice exhibitors.

Beginning promptly at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, the classes will get under way at Idlewood Kennels on Roswell road. Authorities on all breeds will be on hand to advise and coach beginners on the ring manners of their particular breed, tell them what should be done in the way of grooming before show time, and just why, even if Fido is a playful soul, he shouldn't nip the judge.

Following the handling classes and beginning at 4:30, a mock dog show will be held, with J. J. Duncan, well known all-breed judge, conducting the affair. Owners and dogs will go through all the motions of an honest-to-goodness dog show. This rehearsal will acquaint the novice with the actual workings of the show ring and impart a feeling of ease when the real show rolls around.

To encourage local entries this year and promote interest among people owning only one or two dogs, nearly 75 per cent of all trophies offered are placed on puppy classes, local classes and field trial classes.

Wanted No Time

Buck was hesitant about leaving his grandparents with whom he lived, but successive reverses—starting with Pearl Harbor—were more than he could bear. So one night after dinner he went to his grandmother and said, "Granny, I want to help my country. Could you and grandfather get along without me?"

The grandparents said they would make out somehow and for him to enter the service.

He went immediately to a recruiting office, and so eager to get in uniform was he that he waived even the time necessary for going back home to pick up a suitcase, razor and toothbrush.

A few of the boys at the office went out to Fort Mac to see Buck off for a new station.

They hardly recognized him in his uniform. He looked larger and as erect as a ramrod. Even while his company was at ease he stood at attention.

He greeted the "boys" civilly, chest out, head erect, and eyes straight ahead, and as the company marched off, he raised right hand over right eye in a final salute to his Constitution mates.

They stood there, the goofs, all choked up, and wondered how they'd ever had the heart to kid him; to send him upstairs for striped ink and to bring down glaring fake headlines about the ineligibility of Frankie Sinkwich, his idol.

Jordan Bottom has two great loves—the service and Georgia. And if those Red and Black Bulldogs fight as hard as Buck does as a soldier, Coaches Wallace Butts, Ears Whitworth, et al., will have nothing to fear.

Alf Anderson Hits Hard But Is Costly Afield

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 27. (AP)—Pittsburgh's blazing hot Buccaneers today beat Chicago's White Sox, 4 to 1, for their fourth straight victory and 11 out of their last 12 games.

Alf Anderson, who has been suffering with a sore arm while Pete Coscarart seems to be getting the regular shortstop post for the Pirates, figured in the first two scores. Alf doubled in the third, moved to third on Tresh's poor throw trying to trap him on second and scored on an out.

Then by making the first of his two errors, Anderson let Wells get to second in the fourth, from where he counted the lone Sox tally on Wright's single.

Hammond 6th in Swim Meet

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 27. (AP)—Yale's powerful swimming team, regarded by eastern experts as the greatest ever assembled in intercollegiate ranks, performed up to expectations tonight as it piled up the high total of 38 points in the opening national collegiate championship competition in the Harvard pool.

By scoring in each of the six first-day events and winning three of them, the Elis managed to take a 16-point lead on Ohio State, the most threatening of their 29 widely scattered rivals.

The defending Michigan, winner for the past eight years, stood third with 17 points. The other 10 scoring teams were Northwestern with seven, Rutgers with six, Harvard and Massachusetts State four each, Princeton three, Dartmouth, North Carolina, Minnesota and Occidental two each, and Pennsylvania with a single point.

Dennan Hammond, North Carolina star, who prepped at Dartmouth and is an All-American, finished sixth in the 150-yard backstroke final which was won by Dennenbaum, of Yale, in 1:35.3. Earlier in the night Hammond won his way to the finals by coming second to Ohio State's Mark Follansbee, who swam the distance in 1:37.2. Follansbee placed second in the finals.

Louis Knocks Out Abe Simon in 6th Round

Call in The Game
BY JACK TROY

Preferred Cold Steel Jordan (Buck) Bottom, one of the greatest moral boosters of University of Georgia football who ever lived, is working his way to the front lines of battle.

One day Buck, who worked for us in sports, came in the office and said, "I've made up my mind; I'm going to enlist in the service of my country as a private. My second lieutenantcy lapsed a few years ago and I won't attempt to get it back."

Next day Buck, who had an aging grandmother and grandfather as partial dependents, joined the Army at Fort McPherson. He promised to come back to see us. We had planned to run a picture of him in uniform.

But he never came back. He never asked to leave Fort Mac. He spent all his time before leaving for another camp learning soldiering all over again.

There's a great story about Buck. He graduated from Georgia with honors. He had a splendid R. O. T. C. record. Everything was in his favor, plus newspaper experience, to be eligible for intelligence.

But when a job in intelligence was offered, Buck stood erect, with a gleam in his eye, and answered: "Sir, I prefer to face the cold steel of the enemy; I will go to Singapore if need be."

Honest Heroism After the fall of Singapore Buck was more than alarmed about the future of this country. Dim memories stirred within him. His father was killed in action in the last war. He seldom spoke of it, but when Singapore fell and the Japs seemed to be menacing our freedom, Buck felt it was time for something to be done.

Just before he joined the service we rid our files of all the old cuts we could spare—in the interest of national defense. The government needed zinc.

Buck virtually did the job singlehanded. He spent four days at it and probably produced more than half a ton of metal.

"Bundles for Japan," was Buck's terse description of the scrap metal.

Then Singapore fell. "It may be too late to help," he muttered.

We used to kid him about taking these things so hard. But we can all see now that we didn't realize what was going on in his mind.

A father killed in action in the Argonne . . . a mother dead a few years. Buck was lonely, and a little lost. He hungered for something he couldn't find.

We didn't think about all this when we kidded him, or maybe subconsciously we did and hoped it would cheer him up.

Anyway, there's something about a soldier like Buck that commands our utmost admiration and respect, stirs us to the very soul.

" . . . Sir, I prefer to face the cold steel of the enemy; I will go to Singapore if need be."

He never meant anything any more seriously.

Wasted No Time Buck was hesitant about leaving his grandparents with whom he lived, but successive reverses—starting with Pearl Harbor—were more than he could bear. So one night after dinner he went to his grandmother and said, "Granny, I want to help my country. Could you and grandfather get along without me?"

The grandparents said they would make out somehow and for him to enter the service.

He went immediately to a recruiting office, and so eager to get in uniform was he that he waived even the time necessary for going back home to pick up a suitcase, razor and toothbrush.

A few of the boys at the office went out to Fort Mac to see Buck off for a new station.

They hardly recognized him in his uniform. He looked larger and as erect as a ramrod. Even while his company was at ease he stood at attention.

He greeted the "boys" civilly, chest out, head erect, and eyes straight ahead, and as the company marched off, he raised right hand over right eye in a final salute to his Constitution mates.

They stood there, the goofs, all choked up, and wondered how they'd ever had the heart to kid him; to send him upstairs for striped ink and to bring down glaring fake headlines about the ineligibility of Frankie Sinkwich, his idol.

Jordan Bottom has two great loves—the service and Georgia. And if those Red and Black Bulldogs fight as hard as Buck does as a soldier, Coaches Wallace Butts, Ears Whitworth, et al., will have nothing to fear.

Alf Anderson Hits Hard But Is Costly Afield

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 27. (AP)—Pittsburgh's blazing hot Buccaneers today beat Chicago's White Sox, 4 to 1, for their fourth straight victory and 11 out of their last 12 games.

Alf Anderson, who has been suffering with a sore arm while Pete Coscarart seems to be getting the regular shortstop post for the Pirates, figured in the first two scores. Alf doubled in the third, moved to third on Tresh's poor throw trying to trap him on second and scored on an out.

Then by making the first of his two errors, Anderson let Wells get to second in the fourth, from where he counted the lone Sox tally on Wright's single.

Giant Absorbs Terrific Blows In Game Fight

Challenger Climbs to Feet Too Late After Last Trip to Floor.

By SID FEDER.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, March 27. (AP)—Joe Louis won a big one for Uncle Sam's soldier boys tonight.

The first heavyweight champion in ring history to come out of the Army to defend that honor felled the game giant from Long Island, Abe Simon, in six rounds, and with his fists rang the cash register for the Army Emergency Relief Fund to the tune of $50,000 or more.

With the roar of a crowd that nearly filled this sports palace ringing in his ears after Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson paid him tribute as a "fine soldier and a truly great champion," the Bomber chopped the huge 255 1-4 pound man-mountain down finally at 16 seconds of the sixth round, but only after firing his Sunday shots at a challenger who took everything and asked for more. In fact, Abe was getting up to come back to the wars at the finish, but arrived on his feet just a split second after Referee Eddie Josephs tolled the clinching "ten."

Twice earlier, Abe, the ample, who went 13 rounds with Joe in Detroit a year ago, was on the floor. The bell sounded ending a round each time, but once the next heat got underway, he was right back in there with a both-ersome left jab and a rushing, crowding body attack.

Yet, all the time you knew it couldn't last—that sooner or later Joe would put the crusher on. He did, finally, just as everyone—even Abe's best friends—expected, thus adding to his great record as a fighter and a citizen. It was the second time in 11 weeks that he had fought for "nuthin' cept my country," as he put it. On January 8, he levelled another giant, Buddy Baer, for the Navy Relief Fund, and he did for the Army Emergency Relief tonight, on that occasion he also turned his entire purse over to the benefit.

The job over, he rests this weekend, then in his own quiet way, he'll help the camp life of Long Island, Monday, to pick up his job of "gettin' to be a good soldier." That's Buck Private Louis.

The fans poured their money in for the benefit and the fight. All together, $12,200 paid to sit in on the proceedings and contributed to a gross gate of $132,430.41.

Bowling

The Hemlock team of the Southern Bell Ladies' League walked away with the half honors by winning 16 out of 20 games bowled. Information was second with 13 wins and 7 losses, and Jackson finished third with 12 wins and 8 losses. Miss Baggett, of the Hemlock team, completed a sweep for her team by winning handily the annual tournament among league members with a fine set of 338. Her first and the highest game bowled in the event was 140.

The Naval Air Cadets started their bowling activities with a bang, 22 cadets turning out for the matches. Hood featured with a game of 121, closely followed by Pippins with a game of 120.

In the Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster League Rainwater was really on his game with a set of 334. Patterson helped with a game of 125 and their team, Mail and Records, ran away with three wins over Civilian Personnel.

Tonight at 8 o'clock the weekly handicap sweepstakes will be held at the downtown alleys. Three cash prizes, one each of the ladies' and the men's divisions will be awarded the high scorers. Over 50 people are expected to compete in this popular event.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 27. (AP)—Manager Willis Hudlin announced last night the Little Rock Travelers had purchased Third Baseman Robert "Buck" Fauscett from the Minneapolis club, of the American Association. Purchase price was not announced.

Fauscett batted .280 last year with the Minneapolis club with which he has been three seasons. He formerly played with Indianapolis.

Our Boots Wins Seminole Event

MIAMI, Fla., March 27. (AP)—Our Boots, winner of $115,182 in two years of racing, came to life at Tropical Park today to win a three-length victory—his first in nine months—in the $1,200 Seminole.

The four-year-old colt from the stable of Royce G. Martin was the favorite with a scant crowd of 4,935, smallest of the season, who had been shocked by a succession of long-shots, including a daily double pay-off of $1,925.20 for $2.

Our Boots did the mile and 70 yards of the event in one minute, 42 3-5 seconds on a fast track. Mrs. J. Etinger's Sir Marlboro was second, four full lengths ahead of Charles S. Howard's disappointing Porter's Cap. Bright Trace was another five lengths off the pace and Blue Warrior trailed three more lengths in the rear, in the five-horse race.

Boys' High Team Plays Alumni All-Stars Today

Castleberry, Magbee, Berman, Sheldon in Backfield Coached by McArthur, Bond.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

The "on-again, off-again, on-again" football game between Coach Shorty Doyal's Boys' High grid team and a recently corralled eleven, made up of former Purple Hurricane stars and coached by Roy McArthur and Claude Bond, will be played at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Rose Bowl field, barring pestilence, famine or flood, it was announced late last night.

It was reported by staunch supporters of the alumni team, that Doyal had learned what an imposing array of stars the Tech freshmen coach and trainer had got together and was trying to postpone the game because of rain, when they vowed only a slight dew had "fallen" at Rose Bowl field. At any rate, Shorty, whom the disdainful nicknamed "Chick on," drew himself up to his full six feet four inches, and roared: "Sirs, my honor is at stake. We shall play the game, and we shall win—I hope."

The tilt, which will wind up several weeks of spring practice for Boys' High, definitely is on, and Doyal has requested his charges to be at the Georgia Tech dressing quarters at 1 o'clock.

It is an imposing lineup that McArthur and Bond will hurl at the young Purple machine which has been unbeaten in two years. Clint Castleberry and Bill Magbee, two All-G. I. A. A. stars of last year, will team with Alf Berman and Bobby Sheldon in the backfield.

Gordon (Laundryman) Clay and Dixie Cohen give the alumni a great pair of ends. The Furchgott brothers, "Pin Head" Alexander, Walter Vandenberg, Red Eaves and Jack Jordan are line-men who can more than hold their own.

Tommy Freeman, Bobby Chastain, Buck Miller, Billy Haas and Johnny Griffith, a made-over guard, are the Boys' High backs who have been looking best in the spring drills. Joe Floyd and Leon Bridges will open at the ends; Chub Jenkins and Cliff Griffin at the tackles; Buck Stainton and Elbert Bradley at the guards and Julian Montgomery at center.

Both sides are confident of an overwhelming victory and it will cost 30 cents to see the titanic struggle which will wind up the "season."

Back of Munday with 67's came Jimmy Thomson, of Del Monte, Cal., and Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, L. I., as 21 men beat or equaled par 71 over the Starmount Forest Club course. Ben Hogan was one of the 71 shooters.

Defending Champion Byron Nelson missed being among the leaders by inadvertently touching his ball with his putter on No. 13. Lying within six inches of the hole, Nelson addressed his ball carefully and the stroke it cost him placed him at 72.

Sam Bates, Norfolk, Va., amateur, carded a 70 to top the simon pures among the early finishers in the big field.

Hail Officials Study Release Of GBI Agent

Ed L. Norton Allegedly Dismissed After Raid on Tourist Camp.

Officials of Hail county yesterday were studying the case of Ed L. Norton, investigator for the Georgia Bureau of Investigation of the State Patrol, who allegedly was discharged a short time after he had led a raid on a tourist camp near Gainesville, said to be operated by cousins of Major W. Price Reed, deputy commissioner of public safety.

Norton, records at the Hail county jail reveal, led a squad of Hail county deputies in a raid on Ray's Tourist Camp March 18. Two women and one man, occupying cabins in the camp, were arrested on moral charges, officials said.

Patrol officials denied the raid had anything to do with Horton's dismissal but said it was because of bad debts.

Norton, detailed to Hail county at the request of Sheriff Bell and Solicitor J. Fred Kelly to investigate a series of automobile and tire thefts and conditions existing around drive-ins in that area.

Hail county officials, in commenting on the case, said Norton "worked faithfully night and day and was getting results."

The big fund included $2,200,000,000 automatically available for the lend-lease program, raising the total of appropriations or authorizations for the purpose of arming the nation's allies to $50,000,000,000. In addition the appropriation bill would raise the total of defense and war appropriations since July 1, 1940, to $160,000,000,000.

Special Desert Corps. Meanwhile, Secretary of War Stimson announced preparations for future warfare in the air and on the desert, with the emphasis on a greatly expanded use of gliders and parachute troops. He ordered the immediate creation of a special desert corps of 8,000 and said parachute troops were being expanded to three full regiments.

In presenting the appropriation bill to the house, the appropriations committee stripped its report of military information considered of value to the enemy, but it did make several disclosures: A total of $6,990,000,000 is for building 31,070 planes, completely equipped with spare parts, and ordnance. Money for 33,000 planes was provided in January. A request for funds for 23,550 more is expected soon. The plane building program is scheduled at 60,000 planes in 1942 and 125,000 in 1943.

Almost on Schedule. James V. Forrestal, the under-secretary of the navy, told the committee that the nation's shipyards were keeping "reasonably well—not completely" up to schedule. He said if "certain deficiencies in the steel plants and machine tools" could be broken, shipbuilding schedules would be exceeded.

The committee refused to recommend funds—$2,218,000,000 had been requested—for the creation of an Army specialist corps of uniformed civilians, authorized on February 26 by President Roosevelt. The committee said it opposed such a "quasi-military setup." Other than funds for planes, the appropriation bill included: $925,924,000 for naval ordnance, aviation, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and ship repair; $1,317,225,479 for the Army Quartermaster Service; $4,358,118,283 for military post construction; $3,000,000 for the education and training of defense workers; and $30,000,000 in increased grants to states for old age assistance.

food out of waste," said Cravey, "by using the polluted areas as hatcheries." Oysters become cleaned in pure water and the shells serve as spawning places.

Areas in which oyster fishing is prohibited have been polluted by sewage from Savannah and Brunswick and by waste materials from industrial plants, Cravey said. The ban will become effective after publication of the proclamation once a week for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in one of the six coastal counties. It will remain in effect until "conditions warrant" its being rescinded.

Oyster Fishing Is Banned in Polluted Beds

Move To Affect Coastal Waters Near Brunswick, Savannah.

A ban on oyster fishing in polluted coastal waters around Savannah and Brunswick effective after publication of the required notice was ordered yesterday in a proclamation issued by State Wildlife Director Zack D. Cravey.

Removal of any oysters from the beds described in the proclamation is punishable as a misdemeanor.

Cravey called the order the initial step in the department's efforts to rehabilitate Georgia's oyster fishing industry. He explained oysters would be taken from the polluted beds under the supervision of the chief inspector of coastal fisheries and be replanted in other state waters for propagation purposes. The replanting will start in April or May. "We will make

Cancer Control Discussed by Authority Here

Delay Is Fatal, Dr. Horsley, of Richmond, Tells Field Army.

"Too little and too late" are catastrophes in the control of cancer as well as in war," Dr. J. Shelton Horsley, Richmond, Va., surgeon and leading authority on cancer of the stomach, told members of the Woman's Field Army of the Cancer Control Association here yesterday.

Dr. Horsley, who conducted a cancer clinic at the Georgia Baptist hospital in the afternoon and left last night to return to St. Elizabeth hospital in Richmond, where he is chief surgeon, said delay in making diagnoses and giving treatments is fatal.

Great Obstacle. "One of the greatest obstacles to advancing the knowledge of cancer is the opposition to post mortem examinations," Dr. Horsley said. "Much can be learned by carefully conducted post mortem examinations, and a doctor can add to his knowledge by using this method of information from the dead to aid in the treatment of the living."

"Ewing, a great pathologist in New York, says the best index of the intelligence of a community is the percentage of post mortem examinations to the deaths in that community."

"Another obstacle toward the cure of cancer is that it is not considered a respectable disease. There have been changes in some respects regarding venereal diseases and tuberculosis, but the attitude toward cancer unfortunately has not changed."

Asks Doctors' Aid. Dr. Horsley recommended doctors become "more cancer-minded" and that "the individual be so alarmed in any suspicious case, that a proper and careful examination will be made by a competent physician or surgeon."

Dr. Horsley said that in addition to the work of controlling and curing cancer "is distinctly a defense measure in war time because of the number of persons, healthy and young persons, whose time is partly or entirely absorbed by attention to cancer patients."

Dr. Horsley said there are 150,000 deaths in the United States each year from cancer. "The Women's Field Army," he said, has undertaken to stem this mounting death rate from cancer, and by its unselfish efforts many lives can be saved."

Linder Launches Campaign To Save Tin, Help Farmers

By LAMAR Q. BAILL. "If every merchant in America will adopt the motto and live up to it, I know the housewives will be glad to co-operate."

"American homes are giving up millions of young men to fight overseas. I know that American housewives will support them in this way."

Help Farmers. "If the housewives of America will buy fresh fruits and vegetables from now until winter, this will provide a ready market for products of the farms during the summer while the surplus can be canned for winter use and for shipment overseas."

"This means more and better food at home. It also means more abundant supplies of canned goods for winter use and to insure that our army does not go hungry wherever it may be."

"The National Association of Commissioners of Agriculture is meeting in Washington, D. C., on Monday, March 30. I expect to propose this plan to the National Association and through it to the people of every state in the Union."

All Must Help. "The Food for Victory" campaign cannot mean a great deal if no one is enlisted except the farmers who produce. The farmers will produce to the limit of their ability under the circumstances."

"The Food for Victory" campaign can be turned to great account by the wholehearted co-operation of merchants and housewives throughout the nation.

Comedy Show, Murder, Spy Films on Here

Two of New Movies Take Theme From Current News Events.

By LEE ROGERS. Hollywood makes entertainment out of current events of only a few months past in two of the week's new shows, completely befuddles itself in slapstick "escape" comedy in another, and provides a murder mystery in the fourth, which is supplemented by a stage show.

While good, the offerings are not up to standard, generally speaking. "Nazi Agent" is the Loew's offering. "Ride 'Em Cowboy" is the Fox comedy. "Dangerously They Live" is at the Roxy. "Broadway Varieties" on the stage and "The Body Disappears" is at the Capitol.

Conrad Veidt in Dual Role

"Nazi Agent" is melodramatic stuff, neatly done, at Loew's. It has the veteran character actor Conrad Veidt, who plays the dual role of the Nazi consul in New York and of the consul's free-thinking, freedom-loving brother who escapes Germany and absorbs the spirit of America.

The professor, forced to act as blind to the Nazi spy ring, tries to tip off police, is caught and his consul brother comes to kill him. In the struggle, the professor is the stronger and decides on a desperate plan to play the role of a madman to break up the gang.

Treading on thin details of the consul's life, his own life constantly in danger, the professor meets the various members of the spy ring, always managing to bluff his way past the most intimate members, including the girl friend and the Gestapo. He tips the police in every bit of information he gets, cleverly working in ring members to take suspicion from himself. But his masquerade is discovered by the consul's butler. There are moments of great suspense, some excellent acting in cruel, hard manner by Veidt and a creditable performance by newcomer Ann Ayars, whose figure, voice and carriage give promise of a future in the acting business.

One glaring inconsistency is found in the film. The fake consul makes a bargain with his second in command to save the girl over to the FBI. And in the picture it is kept. An inexpensive production but more in line with the type material current films should be concerned with.

Strong Cast in Roxy Film

Amnesia is used by Hollywood to baffle Nazi agents in "Dangerously They Live," a story of a pretty British girl agent trapped over to the Nazis, which is current at the Roxy.

The cast is strong—John Garfield, Raymond Massey, Lee Patrick, and the newcomer and beauty, Nancy Coleman, who plays the British agent who feigns amnesia. The film is a good psychiatrist (Massey) in the employ of the Nazis, from learning her secret.

Garfield, a young doctor, becomes suspicious of the girl when she is brought to the hospital following an auto accident. He refuses to believe her story of men after her until he sees them for himself. Then he enters the battle against the men trying to destroy cargo ships to Britain. Excitement is the keynote.

Abbott, Costello Play at Fox

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello do some rapid shooting of comic lines in the Universal comedy, "Ride 'Em Cowboy," which has them as dude ranchers at the Fox this week.

A midnight audience last Saturday night howled more continuously at the antics and lines of these two glorified burlesque comedians than at any comedy yet shown at the Fox midnight preview.

The picture concerns itself with finding out situations for A and C to crack jokes. In this it succeeds. There is no story and it needs none. A very funny sequence finds an Indian dummy coming to life and chasing Mr. Costello around with a knife while Mr. Abbott professes to see only the dummy.

In the cast are Dick Foran, an author of wild west stories who has never been close enough before to a horse to get the hay fever he develops when froded on one; Anne Gwynne, the dance ranch operator's daughter who has contempt for the singing of Mr. Foran; the Merry Macs; and Samuel S. Hinds.

Capitol Offers Double Bill

A hilarious mystery-farce on the screen and a stage show, "Broadway Varieties," which opened yesterday at the Capitol, is excellent double-bill entertainment for the whole family.

The vaudeville acts include a musical comedian who plays tunes on a fiddle, a saw, a flute, a balloon, and an automobile tire pump; the Golden Gate Trio, who do a clever Scotch novelty; a group of trained dogs from Hollywood; and a rather good chorus line.

The film offering, "The Body Disappears," features Jeffrey Lynn as a millionaire who disappears on the eve of his wedding day; Edward Everett Horton, the scientist who makes him disappear; blond Jane Wyman, and lethargic Willie Best—DEAN BROOME.
